IN THE CITY.

Those of our citizens who had occasion to travel about the City yesterday, and observed the quiet that prevailed in the various wards and election districts, the lack of all excitement or apparent interest in the election, and the absence of the crowds that usually throng about the polling-places on election day, will be astonished at the heavy vote that is returned as having been cast, and will wonder where the votes came from. They will scarcely believe that the vote of yesterday only lacks three or four thousand of being the heaviest ever cast in this City. And yet, if the returns are correct, such is the fact. The vote last November, which was the largest ever cast in the City, footed up 116,379. The vote returned at yesterday's election will fall little short of 119,000. This can only be accounted for on the theory that more votes found their way into the ballot-box than there were men who went to the polls, or else that there were more counted than were taken from the boxes. This theory is borne out by various facts and figures connected with the registration, which prove clearly that there must have been an immense deal of double voting on the part of citizens or double counting on the part of inspectors. Take the Fifth Ward for example. The total number of voters registered in that ward at the election last November was 2,886. At the December election following fifty-two more names were added to the registry. During the present month 1,509 more names were added, making altogether 4,447. The vote returned from that ward yesterday is 4,314, or only 221 less than the entire registered number for last November, December, and the present May added together. The deaths and removals from the ward since November last, in the ordinary course of events, ought to have been at least double that number, and there is no doubt whatever that hundreds of votes were polled or counted in the ward that were never cast by the men whose names are on the registry. A similar state of facts exists in several other wards, proving conclusively that the grossest frauds were perpetrated in yesterday's election.

REPEATING.

In view of the exposure of the gross election frauds in this City at the last Fall election—frauds that were fully admitted and condemned by both factions of the Democratic Party in the halls of the Legislature last Winter, it was not generally supposed that they would be again resorted to at this election. When the leaders of Tammany Hall discovered, as they did last November, that their own candidates as well as their opponents might be made to suffer from these frauds, they demanded that "repeating should be stopped." The Anti-Tammany factions of the Democracy, who claimed that they had been forced into the business in order to fight the devil with his own weapons, also echoed the demand that "repeating must be stopped." And yet in no election for years past has the business of repeating been carried on in a more open and shameless manner than it was yesterday. The Police made not the slightest effort to prevent it, though they saw it done continually before their eyes, and they actually refused to arrest men for doing it when called upon by citizens and even Magistrates, saying that they had been placed under the orders of the inspectors, and would make no arrests unless requested to do so by them.

In the First, Second, Fourth, Fifth, Seventh, Eleventh, Thirteenth and Seventeenth Wards gangs of repeaters marched to and fro from one poll to another all day long, without the slightest interference from the Police. In some cases they would walk out of the polling-places into the middle of the street, and there in the face and eyes of the Police, would change their coats and hats, and receive their names and directions from the leaders of the gangs before starting for the next poll to repeat their ballots. Not only the Police but the Inspectors of Election were perfectly cognizant of their doings, and so far from making any effort to prevent the frauds, in many cases they facilitated their commission, and appeared to be in full sympathy and collusion with the repeaters. In the First District of the Fourth Ward the frauds were so flagrant that one of the poll clerks became appalled at their enormity, and abandoning his post repaired to Judge Bosworth's office to relate his experiences. He stated that he had seen one man with a club foot vote six times without question from the Inspectors; that he had been called on to record five men named Powers as having voted, when the registry allowed only two, and he clinched his charges with the general fact, that whereas the registry contained 700 names, at 10½ o'clock 500 of them had been voted and no check whatever had been kept upon the registry. Commissioners Berryman and Manierre visited the polling place of the district and became so thoroughly convinced of the truth of the charges, that upon their return the Inspectors were summarily dismissed and other men appointed, with the hope that they would prove better ones.

The question will naturally occur to every reader how such men came to be appointed Inspectors of Election, or why they were not taken into custody by Commissioners Berryman and Manierre after their rascality was thus plainly demonstrated, instead of being merely suspended. This question the Commissioners may perhaps be able to answer. The question will naturally be asked too, who paid these repeaters? For they certainly do not do that kind of work for nothing. Fortunately, the public are enabled this time to fix the responsibility where it belongs. None of the Democratic factions opposed to Tammany Hall, neither the "Young Democracy," nor the "Democratic Union," nor the "Constitutional Union" had any ticket in the field, and therefore had no motive for employing repeaters. Unless they were employed by the Republican Party, which no one pretends, they must have been employed by Tammany Hall, and the election frauds yesterday are to be set down as another specimen of the boasted "reforms" that reconstructed Tammany promised to inaugurate under the new charter.

JUSTICE HOGAN BEATEN BY A REPEATER.

Justice Hogan, who resides in Morris-street, First Ward, presented himself at the First Election District, yesterday morning, for the purpose of depositing his vote. While awaiting his turn the Magistrate was rather surprised to hear a strange man announce himself as Edward Hogan, and proceed to vote in his name. Judge Hogan immediately challenged the vote, but the Inspector refused to notice the challenge, and deposited the vote of the repeater in the ballot-box. The Magistrate then called upon the officer to arrest the repeater, when the policeman declined to do so unless directed by the Inspectors, under whose orders he said he was placed. Justice Hogan was therefore cheated out of his vote, and Magistrate though he was, could obtain no redress.

THE COLORED VOTERS.

Probably the most zealous class of voters in the City yesterday was the newly enfranchised blacks. They seemed to appreciate fully the importance of their new responsibilities, and very few of them neglected to have their names registered. The whole number registered was about 8,000, and, with very few exceptions, they voted the Republican ticket. In fact, in the district of the City where their number is the greatest, including a large portion of the Eighth Ward, one colored man only was suspected by the knowing ones of being recreant to the friends of his race, and voting with the Democracy, and even with regard to him they were not certain. They came out early and obtained their ballots, and with pride of their new citizenship strung upon them, marched confidently to the polls, and for the first time in their lives exercised the right which marks their political equality with the white race. In several of the election districts they had full possession of the booths for distributing Republican votes, and where they had not, they found no difficulty in obtaining the requisite ammunition for the party contest, and were seen safely through by their brother Republicans. No disposition was shown on the part of the rough element of the unterrified Democracy to interfere with their exercise of the privilege of voting, for as they were modestly content with casting their ballots once, they were not regarded as very formidable rivals. The polling-places at which they voted were among the quietest and most orderly in the City.

ARRAIGNMENTS BEFORE THE POLICE COURTS.

The number of persons arrested and arraigned at the Jefferson and Essex Market Police Courts yesterday, for illegal voting, was exceedingly limited, and in view of the vast army of repeaters who crowded the different polling-booths, and the apparently efficient measures which were made for its detection, was very surprising, and was the cause of comment in each Court. The total number brought up at Jefferson Market was ten, of whom five were colored, but even of these only five were convicted and held to bail. At Essex Market Police Court there were six brought forward under arrest, but in every instance they were admitted to bail, which appeared to have been always prepared at no great distance from the precincts of the Court. The prisoners were of that particular class which are inseparable from political groggeries, and seemed to be possessed of all the eminent characteristics that distinguish their associates. There was an exception, however, in the cases of three colored people who were arrested in the Eighth Ward, and who were arraigned at Jefferson Market on a charge of voting under a false address. Upon inquiry, however, it was ascertained that they had no intention of violating the law, and that their arrest originated in a false impression they themselves entertained with respect to the particular locality of their residence. They were immediately discharged, and grinning from ear to ear at the prospect of exoneration from a charge of which they were wholly guiltless, and the nature of which they could scarcely understand, they left the Court. Annexed are the names of those arraigned at Jefferson Market Police Court before Judge Shandley:

Jacob Cornell, colored, was brought up by L. D. Cummings, one of the Inspectors, charged with voting in the Fifth District of the Ninth Ward on a false address. He stated he resided at No. 41 Grove-street, but upon examination it was ascertained that house was unoccupied. Held to answer in default of $500 bail.

John Gaylor, William Butler and John Powell, all colored, were charged with voting under a false address. Upon its being shown that the prisoners acted in ignorance of the number of their residence, and with no intention to violate the law, they were discharged.

Charles Lake, colored, voted three tickets at the polling booth of the First District of the Eighth Ward. He gave his residence to be No. 40 Wooster-street, but after an investigation it was discovered he was unknown there, and he was arrested. Held in default of $500 bail.

John Kelly, who gave his residence as No. 122 West Twenty-seventh-street, voted at the Second District of the Sixteenth Ward under the name of Samuel Musdock. He was brought up at Jefferson Market and held in default of $500 bail.

Alexander McCormack, No. 253 West Thirty-second-street, voted at the Seventeenth District of the Twentieth Ward under the name of Jeremiah Flanagan. Held for trial.

William Clarke voted at the Tenth District of the Fifteenth Ward, giving his address to be No. 193 Sixth-avenue. It was ascertained no person of that name resided there, and the prisoner was arrested and held to answer in default of $500.

Thomas Lilly was arrested by Officer Crook, of the Twenty-eighth Precinct, charged with voting in the Third District of the Twentieth Ward under the name of Thomas McGivney. He was held to answer in default of $500 bail.

At the Essex Market Police Court William Smith was brought up, charged with voting at the Twenty-third District of the Eleventh Ward under the name of James Morris. Held in default of $500 bail.

Augustus McGoutch, charged, on the complaint of John Aliken, with voting in the Twenty-sixth District of the Eleventh Ward, not being a resident of the district. Held in the same amount.

Louis Aehr personated a gentleman of the same name belonging to the Seventeenth District of the Seventeenth Ward yesterday, but was detected. Upon being brought up at the Essex Market Police Court, he was held to answer in default of $500 bail.

Joseph Rollins voted in the Ninth District of the Seventeenth Ward without being a resident there. Held in default of bail.

George W. Fox voted at the Fifth District of the Eleventh Ward on the address of a resident of the ward bearing his name. He was detected, and on being brought up at the Essex Market Police Court, was held in default of $500 bail.

Frank Fergenstein voted at the Seventh District of the Eleventh Ward, under the name of Henry Fergenstein, which name was not registered. He was held in default of $500 bail.

John Mahoney and Thomas Adams quarreled yesterday afternoon, in Second-avenue, near Thirty-fourth-street, over the election, and became so excited that they exchanged pistol shots. Officer Gavigan, of the Twenty-first Precinct, arrested the combatants, before they had wounded either themselves or any of the crowd, and they were locked up for examination. They refused to give their addresses.

Tammany Hall was open last evening for amusement-seekers, but was closed against politicians, unless the latter gained admittance under the former category. Those persons who expected that the Hall would be received by the Tammany Sachems for the reception of the election returns were very much disappointed, the fact being that the result was regarded as a foregone conclusion by the Democratic leaders.

There was no meeting at the Republican Headquarters either. The returns of the election were received at Police Headquarters, and thence conveyed to the Fifth-avenue Hotel, where they were read to a small assemblage.

COURT OF APPEALS—VOTE BY WARDS.

The following is the vote by wards for Chief-Justice and First Associate Justice of the Court of Appeals. The vote for the other Associate Justices varies but little from that for Allen and Mason, except in the case of Mr. Folger, for whom a split Democratic ticket was run in some districts with his name in place of Peckham:

IN BROOKLYN.

The election passed over very quietly, a very light vote having been registered. Only one slight disturbance occurred during the day from a man named William Brennan striking a colored voter, with whom he had an altercation touching the right to vote. Brennan has been held to answer.

The result of the City Judiciary vote has occasioned much excitement among the local politicians, the independent section of the Democrats being somewhat depressed, and their Ring opponents correspondingly elated. The Republicans take their defeat calmly, and are much gratified at the unswerving fidelity of the colored citizens.

THROUGHOUT THE STATE.

The vote cast throughout the State was very light. Republicans seem to have paid but little attention to the election, allowing the Democrats to carry it their own way. The State has gone Democratic by about 25,000. The successful ticket is as follows:

CHIEF JUSTICE.

Sanford E. Church.

ASSOCIATE JUSTICES.

William F. Allen, Charles A. Rapallo,
Rufus W. Peckham, Martin Grover.

The Stanton Family Fund.

To the Editor of the New-York Times:

Some patriotic and benevolent gentlemen belonging to the Union League Club of this City, foremost among whom was our distinguished fellow-citizen Alexander T. Stewart, Esq., projected the scheme of raising a fund for the benefit of Mr. Stanton's family. Mr. Stewart introduced the subject before the Club, and gave impetus to the plan by a subscription of $5,000. A Committee was appointed, of which he was Chairman. Mr. Gilmerna had charge of another subscription among the merchants and others. The result was, a fund has been deposited in the New-York Life Insurance and Trust Company of over $61,000. The report of the Committee was made on Thursday evening to the Union League Club, which passed a hearty vote of thanks to Mr. A. T. Stewart for his services and liberality in the matter. One feature of the report deserves especial notice. The portion of the whole fund collected which passed through Mr. Stewart's hands, including his own subscription, was about $24,000. From the hour any of these funds reached him until the subscription was completed and the fund paid over to the Trust Company, Mr. Stewart added interest, so that the fund was thereby augmented more than $400. It was justly remarked before the Club by a member who moved that the Publication Committee print the whole report, that such a sentiment of patriotism and liberality as Mr. Stewart had evinced in reference to this fund, justly entitled him to the commendation of the public.

WOMAN'S RIGHTS.

The Parliamentary Franchise to Women—Mr. Jacob Bright on the Condition of the Fair Sex.

In the House of Commons, May 5, the second reading of the bill to extend the parliamentary franchise to women who are otherwise eligible in respect of property qualification for its exercise, was moved by Mr. Jacob Bright, according to whom the female sex in this country are in a very little better position than the negroes in the Southern States of America before the late civil war. The motion having been seconded by Col. Sykes, the "previous question" was moved by Mr. Scourfield, who, readily conceding everything that could be advanced in praise of "lovely woman," opposed the bill, because there was no evidence to show that it was the desire of the sex themselves to have the voting franchise conferred upon them. Mr. W. Fowler seconded the amendment, and contended that the legitimate sphere of women's influence was in their own homes, and not in the political arena. Sir C. Dilke spoke in favor of the bill. Mr. B. Hope pronounced the bill an insult to married women, because it excluded them from its provisions, and a fragmentary and illogical piece of legislation, for there women voters there would also be women canvassers and women bribers, and they all knew how difficult it would be to convict a woman! Dr. Lyon Playfair argued that the introduction of women's influence into politics would be advantageous to the State inasmuch as it would import a higher morality, and the Legislature would then be induced to devote more of its attention to such questions as the health of the community, the education of the public, the care of the poor, and the treatment of the sick in infirmaries and in their own homes. Sir G. Jenkinson gave a cordial support to the bill, for reasons connected with the possession of property which implied the exercise of certain rights and duties. If women were fit to hold property and administer it they were certainly entitled to all the rights and privileges which pertained to its possession. Mr. Muntz said he saw no reason for excluding from the parliamentary franchise any class of persons who paid rates. Illustrative of the hardship in practice of the exclusion of women from political privileges, he mentioned the case of a lady in possession of an estate worth £6,000 a year, and who, though she managed her property admirably, had no vote for it, while her gardener and laborers were represented. Sir H. Croft did not like to hear of the Dr. Mary Walkers, and others who went about the country with their husbands delivering lectures on women's rights. Rather he agreed with Mr. Punch, that those who were wanting women's rights were wanting women's charms. His own constituents were fair, graceful and fourpane, and not having any taste for agitation on the subject, he should vote against the measure. Mr. Secretary Bruce, speaking in the name of the Government, expressed himself favorable to delay, owing to the many points involved in the question and the inability of Ministers under the pressure of public business to give that consideration to the proposal to which the importance of the subject entitled. In signifying his determination to go to a division, Mr. Jacob Bright announced that the Manchester Town Council had that day met and resolved, by a majority of more than three to one, to petition in favor of the bill. The House then divided, and, having negatived the "previous question" by 124 to 91, gave the bill a second reading amid loud cheers.

A Village in the South Surprised by a Piquet Chief—He Pillages and Destroys It, and Commits Horrible Atrocities—Peace Restored at Genaives—The Elections, &c.

From Our Own Correspondent.

PORT-AU-PRINCE, Saturday, April 30, 1870.

One of the Piquet chiefs, the notorious Sifera, who was one of Salnave's leaders, has escaped from Jeromie, and has appeared on the plains of Aux Cayes with a band of followers. They have burned and pillaged the village of Fortis Piment, killing men, women and children, and committing most horrible atrocities. Sifera was one of the most brutal of all of the Piquet leaders, and has a long score to settle for murders and other barbarities committed during and since the time of Salnave. The Commandant of the District Coteaux is in pursuit of him with a formidable force, and the men have sworn not to leave the woods until he is taken.

The disturbances at Gonaives, caused by an opposition to the Government, has been quieted and order again restored. Loquet, the Secretary of State, went down there, and by his influence among the people has succeeded in preventing further outbreaks. A number of the insurgents were captured and several others surrendered.

Gen. Dominique, Commandant of the South, arrived at Aux Cayes from here on the 9th, and was enthusiastically received by the people. He left in the war steamer Terror for St. Marc. .....The elections are still going on, and forty-three members have already been elected to the Assembly. The steamer Clara Helena had arrived from Kingston, whither she went to change her flag from British to Haytian....Gold 260.

Victor Hugo to the Conspirators in England.

Among those who were unable to be present at the recent revolutionary banquet, in London, was Victor Hugo; but he sent the following letter of apology: Hauteville House, 24th April, 1870. Citizens: I hasten to respond to your honorable appeal. You are right to say that I am with you.

SPAIN.

The Vacant Throne—Prince Frederick of Prussia Urged to be its Occupant—A Casus Belli between France and Prussia—Attitude of Parties—Gen. Prim.

From Our Own Correspondent.

MADRID, Thursday, April 28, 1870.

A few days since the President of the Cortes, M. ZORILLA, had a conference with M. RUANO, a Republican, and Secretary of the Chamber, in order to persuade him to abandon the idea of demanding an explanation of the Government on the subject of its intention of continuing the statu quo. M. ZORILLA told the Republican Deputy that he would not repent of adjourning for a short time his interpellation. We now have the solution of this enigma, and thus we give it, just as it has reached us from Paris, coming from a person generally very well informed. Parisian diplomacy has discovered that the Spanish Government was in earnest negotiations with the Court of Berlin, to obtain its acquiescence to the acceptance of the crown of Spain by Prince FREDERIC, of Prussia. The Emperor sent for M. OLOZAGA a day or two since, and demanded explanations on this subject. The Spanish diplomat replied that he was entirely unaware that his Government had taken any steps in this sense. The Emperor retorted that in fact it was easier to ignore than to explain these advances, which were well known to have been made by the Spanish Ministry, but that M. OLOZAGA ought to know that the French Government was resolutely opposed to this project. The Emperor is reported to have added: "If you wish further information, Mr. Ambassador, I can assure you that the Spanish Government and the Cabinet of Berlin are entirely agreed, and that a few questions of detail alone remain to be settled before laying the whole affair before the Cortes." Thus put, this question becomes a European one. It will not, in this case, be left to Spain and Prussia to solve, for it will probably become a casus belli between France and Prussia. M. OLOZAGA retired after the interview, profoundly impressed. M. MERCIER DE FORTANDRE, it is said, has received very precise instructions in unison with the sentiment of the Emperor, as expressed to M. OLOZAGA. The effect that this revelation has produced in Madrid may be imagined. Naturally, the Republicans turn into ridicule this new phase of Progressist efforts to obtain a royal candidate, that is to say, to sustain for a time the majority of the Deputies, and the diplomatic party urbi et orbi, at home and abroad.

ATTITUDE OF PARTIES.

The Chamber of Deputies is greatly divided on the irritating questions of retaining the statu quo for one or two years longer, of giving to the Regent the attributes and powers of a monarch, or of proceeding to the election of a King. The Republicans, the Democrats, and a fraction of the Progressists, wish to preserve the statu quo. The Carlists, the Liberals, and another fraction of the Progressists, wish to proceed to the election of a King, after the Cortes shall have voted the two organic laws on the municipalities and the general counsels. It is presumed that the vote will come off in the latter half of May, and the debates will be angry. The Electoral law is voted, but article No. 12, which treats of the Parliamentary incompatibilities, has not been revised. The Ministers and the members of the Commission have had several conferences, but have not been able to come to any understanding as to the new project. The Commission insists upon maintaining the principle of absolute incompatibility, which threatens to remove about ninety deputies who draw high salaries. The Republicans and the Democrats insist that there be no public functionaries admitted to the Cortes.

GEN. PRIM.

A rumor has been circulated, with the intention of alarming the Regent SERRANO, that Gen. PRIM was intriguing to obtain his place in case he should give his resignation, and that PRIM once in power an era of political excitement will begin. Gen. PRIM has a certain number of Deputies in the Cortes in his favor, but he is not strong enough to be elevated to the Regent's position. He might obtain it by a coup d'état skillfully effected, but he will not undertake one at present, with the knowledge that he has few superior officers of the army in his favor. Gen. PRIM has caused the transportation to Madrid of a number of revolving canon, in anticipation of the grave events which are in prospect. The Republicans understand that the decisive moment approaches, and that their hopes will be dashed for a long time if they do not now succeed in bringing about the form of government which they desire. They are preparing for a struggle on any ground which the Government may select.

NORTH CAROLINA POLITICS.

The Republican State Convention—A Harmonious Gathering—The Platform.

The Raleigh (N. C.) Standard asserts that during the deliberations of the Republican State Convention, which was held in that city last week, and remained in session two days, the greatest harmony prevailed. Hon. SAMUEL F. PHILLIPS was unanimously nominated for Attorney-General, Hon. LOUIS P. OLDS, the present incumbent, having declined a renomination. Hon. J. C. ABBOTT, Chairman of the Committee appointed to prepare resolutions, submitted the following report, which was unanimously adopted:

Resolved, That the Republican Party in North Carolina hereby reaffirms the platform and principles heretofore announced by its Conventions, and pledges its adherence to and co-operation with the Union Republican Party of the nation, in the maintenance and practical application of those great principles of equality, right and justice which have saved the Union, preserved liberty, and crowned the American Republic with the admiration and blessings of the world.

Resolved, That we heartily approve and indorse the firm and practical administration of public affairs by President GRANT and Gov. HOLDEN, and we tender to the former, as chief of our Union, and to the law-abiding and liberty-loving people of North Carolina, for their devoted services to the country, their steady support of republican liberty and their diligent exertions in securing to every citizen the equal rights, privileges and immunities of a common citizenship in this republic of freemen.

Resolved, That we unite our congratulations with those of every patriot of the Union, on the restoration of the recently insurgent States to representation in Congress and to equal rights, benefits, advantages and powers under the National Government; and we welcome to fellowship the State of North Carolina to aid in defend the Union and the national authority against all enemies, foreign and domestic, and in support of the greatest maintenance of equality, law and liberty in all conditions, and toward all classes and conditions of men in our country.

Resolved, That it is the highest and most important duty of government to protect the citizen in the free enjoyment and exercise of his civil rights and privileges and against unauthorized restraints upon his liberty from all local combinations and prejudices, accompanied with acts of intimidation, violence or outrage, which shall fail to be suppressed by the local authorities.

Resolved, That every citizen should have complete equality before the law and in civil and political rights—unabridged on account of race, color, or previous condition—and that we look with confidence to the early day, when all being secure in their rights, there can be no excuse or occasion for any withholding of privileges on account of past offenses, except such as are imposed by the Constitution of the State.

Resolved, That it is incumbent on the National Government and on all classes in every section of the country, by exact justice, by friendly conduct, by kindly intercourse, by measures of utility and benevolence, to seek to obliterate the ill-feelings and animosities engendered by the late civil war, and to restore the fellowship, confidence and mutual good will which should subsist between the sections and citizens of a united republic of freemen and equals.

Resolved, That the laws, enactments and footing legislation of a common government should be extended alike to all sections of a common country.

Resolved, That those errors in recent legislation relating to internal improvements and the State finances, which were committed by the united votes of Democrats and Republicans in the Legislature, are disavowed by the Republican Party of North Carolina, and the party is hereby pledged to avoid and remedy the same, by such practical and suitable measures of legislation as shall promote and accomplish the various objects of internal improvements in the State, and place the finances upon a sound and economical basis.

Resolved, That the Republican Party of North Carolina is committed to, and will support with all its influence and power, the free public school system, including the proper support of the university contemplated by the Constitution of the State and organized by law.

Resolved, That the Congress of the United States be requested to so alter and modify the laws now in existence in regard to the distillation of fruit as that the small distillers of the country may convert the products of their orchards and vines into brandy, upon such terms as will not be onerous or oppressive.

Resolved, That it is the purpose of the Republican Party to foster and encourage manufactures, the mechanic arts, agriculture and other productive industries, and the rights and interests of laborers, by proper legislation; that it disavows proscription of any class on account of nativity, but on the contrary cordially invites to North Carolina immigration of labor and capital from all sections of this and European countries, and extends a pledge that they will be received and protected in all their social, political and religious opinions.

Resolved, That we join in the general congratulation upon the adoption of the Thirteenth, Fourteenth and Fifteenth Amendments to the Constitution of the United States, and heartily pledge our co-operation and active manner to the speedy and complete adjustment of the national relations, and the general prosperity of the country.

The Legislature, at its regular session in the Winter, failed to make adequate provision for the expenses of the State, and doubts exist as to the validity of several acts passed at that session.

A Minnesota man, who last Fall cut himself badly with a scythe, and subsequently felt that he was at out to die, told his wife that he had a brother who was buried alive, and urged her to cut his throat after he was dead to make a sure thing of it. The woman promised, and kept her word.

The Quebec Mercury predicts that in a short time the American doctrines of allegiance and naturalization, now adopted by England, will probably be those of the whole earth; and it admits that, in fact, modern facilities of transit, travel and communication make it convenient and desirable that such should be the case.

Hon. HORATIO KING has published a card in one of the Washington papers, declaring that the attack of Mr. CHARLES HAYS, of Alabama, upon him, in the House, was unprovoked, and that his statements in reference to his action in urging the claim of C. S. DEVINE upon the Navy Department were very unjust to him.

Two unmarried sisters, RUTH and HANNAH ADAMS, who have lived together in Newburyport, Mass, died of lung fever, on Saturday night, within a few hours of each other, in the house in which they were born and have always lived. The former was seventy-seven and the latter seventy-five years of age.

The Providence Journal notes that, although a judicial investigation has been made necessary there by the mysterious death of a man named ANGELL, in which the Coroner is an ANGELL, the foreman of the jury an ANGELL, and the principal witnesses ANGELLS, it is developing phases of life that are far from angelic.

ENOCH R. BORDEN, Esq., one of the best-known members of the New-Jersey Press, died in Trenton on Monday evening, aged forty-nine years. He held a position in Washington during Mr. FILLMORE's Administration, but during most of his active life was connected with the Trenton Gazette. He was Gov. NEWELL's Private Secretary, and was Secretary of the State Senate in 1865 and 1866.

The editors and newspaper publishers in Maine and New-Hampshire, are to hold a joint convention at Rye Beach, near Portsmouth. B. P. SHILLABER, of Boston, better known as "Mrs. Partington," is to deliver the poem. SHILLABER can make his poem as witty as he or they could wish it to be, if he seeks to make it witty; but if he tries to make it serious and "moral," as even he has been known to do, it may be amusing in a manner painful to him and irksome to the assembled audience of the two States.

Senator CORBETT, of Oregon, has written a letter to Judge J. G. WILSON, congratulating him upon his nomination for Congress, and saying that he cannot doubt that the people of his State will elect Gen. JOEL PALMER Governor. Mr. CORBETT adds: "Let our young State be true to its honest instincts and repudiate all repudiators. Let no one have the power to say that Oregon ever voted for any form of repudiation. As for my part, I will see my substance perish and my right arm wither before I will support by vote or act any form of repudiation of this sacred debt."

The trial of Rev. Dr. J. B. CLARK, before the Allegheny Presbytery of the United Presbyterian Church, for breach of promise of marriage, was begun at Allegheny on Monday. The lady interested in the case is Miss LILLIE B. HAWKES, a member of his congregation. It is understood that the promise of marriage is admitted, and that the defense relies upon the sufficiency of his reasons for breaking off the engagement. The accusers have three or four hundred letters written by him, which they are anxious to introduce, and which the defense as earnestly wish to keep out of the case.

New-Orleans is agitated by a rumor that somebody has set on foot a movement looking to the closing of the markets on Sunday. It is contended that by reason of the moisture and heat neither meat nor vegetables bought on Saturday can be preserved in good condition for use on Sunday, and the Times, which says that the Sunday markets constitute one of the most cheerful and agreeable characteristics of the city, expresses the hope that Puritanism and Blueslightism have not yet obtained a sufficient stronghold there to make it even safe or prudent for any man to propose seriously to obliterate those great landmarks of the Crescent City.

The Portland (Me.) Press earnestly protests against the reinstatement of Ex-Naval Constructor WILLIAM L. HANSCOM, who resigned in 1866. The Press says that he made strenuous efforts to get reinstated in 1869, but failed because of certain affidavits that were filed with Secretary WELLES, charging him with receiving money from workmen for obtaining them places in the Charlestown Navy-yard, and that both President JOHNSON and the Secretary were of the opinion that a man of the character described in the sworn statements filed at the Navy Department was unfit for the place, or, indeed, for any place in the gift of the Government—they arriving at this conclusion notwithstanding the fact that HANSCOM was in political sympathy with them.

A servant girl who was sent a day or two ago to a druggist in this City, with a request that he would give her some castor-oil "disguised as much as possible," was asked by the druggist if she liked soda-water and replied in the affirmative. The druggist thereupon gave her a glass strongly flavored with lemon, with much oil cast upon the troubled water. Nothing that she lingered after receiving this, the druggist inquired the cause and was told that she was waiting for the oil. "Oh," replied the man of drugs complaisantly, "you have taken that." The startled woman gazed at him in dismay a moment and then exclaimed, "Oh murder, I wanted it for a man who is very sick."

OBITUARY.

Gen. Robert Wilson, of Missouri.

The St. Joseph (Mo.) Herald records the death in that City of pneumonia, on the evening of the 9th inst., of Gen. ROBERT WILSON, who was born in Virginia in 1809. His mother was a relative of the late Hon. WILLIAM L. YANCEY, of Alabama. At an early age he removed to Franklin, Mo., and subsequently to Fayette, in the same State, and of that town he was the first Postmaster. In 1836, being a Brigadier-General in the State Militia, he was directed by the Governor to hear and determine all the questions of dispute between the citizens and the Mormons, then residing in Caldwell County, and this difficult matter he accomplished to the entire satisfaction of the people and the authorities of the State. In 1840 he entered upon the practice of law, and although a Whig in politics, and living in a Democratic district, was elected to the Legislature in 1844, and again in 1846. In 1854 he was elected to the State Senate by a handsome majority over his Democratic opponent, though the district was strongly Democratic, and he was re-elected in 1858. He was a good stump speaker, and in 1860 he made many able speeches in favor of BELL and EVERETT. While in the State Senate he was the acknowledged leader of the Whigs, and to his sagacity and vigilance was due, in great measure, the defeat of the bill for the sale of the free negroes in Missouri. In the last Legislature of which he was a member, while CLAIB. JACKSON was Governor, he opposed and fought to the end the Military Bill, which was defeated in that body looking to the forcible secession of the State. As the contest waxed warm, he and JOHN SCOTT of St. Joseph, with Dr. MORRIS of St. Louis and Mr. GORDON of Boone were the only open, outspoken, fearless Union men in the Senate. In 1861 he was elected to the State Convention, called to consider the relations of Missouri with the Federal Government. This Convention was called by the Secessionists, but the Unionists elected a majority of the delegates. In the organization of that body—the most important one that was ever held in Missouri, for it deposed the State officers and turned out the State officials and installed a Provisional Government throughout, with HAMILTON GAMBLE for Governor, and WILLARD P. HALL for Lieutenant-Governor—the Unionists voted for STERLING PRICE, then an avowed Union man, for President, and Gen. WILSON and Vice-President. Both were elected. STERLING PRICE went off with CALEB JACKSON into the rebellion, and Gen. WILSON became President of the Convention. That body was composed of the ablest men in the State, including Hon. John B. Henderson, Willard P. and Wm. A. Hall, Uriel Wright, James O. Broadhead, Hamilton Gamble, Samuel M. Breckinridge, and many others. Before adjourning, the country was plunged into civil war, and the two United States Senators, WALDO P. JOHNSON and TRUSTEN POLK, having wandered off into the Confederacy, were expelled, and the Governor appointed Gen. JOHN B. HENDERSON to the vacancies. He took his seat in the Senate of the United States in 1861 and served till his successor, Hon. B. GRATZ BROWN, was elected by the Legislature in December, 1862. Since that time Gen. WILSON has for the most part resided with his son-in-law, RUFUS L. MCDONALD, of St. Joseph. He owned a farm in Andrew County, but he never resided upon it after the commencement of the war. The rebels stole from him nearly $25,000 worth of horses, cattle and other personal property, and having never married again, he let the old farm go, and made his home with his daughter. The St. Joseph Herald, from which we glean the foregoing facts, continues: "In 1864 his friends throughout this part of the State were enthusiastic in the determination to run him for Governor against CLAIBORNE F. JACKSON, and many of the Bell and Everett journals hoisted the name of their favorite and praised the virtues of 'The Farmer of Andrew.' He has been President of the Northwestern Agricultural and Mechanical Society ever since its organization. As a presiding officer over a deliberative or parliamentary body, he had very few equals—ever cool and calm, never thrown off his guard by excitement or passion, and prompt to decide every question which came before him. He was proverbially upright, and of the strictest honesty and integrity of character. Kind, gentle and very affectionate in his family, he bore the troubles and trials of life with a calm patience and resignation which gave him many warm friends, and not an enemy in the world. His early education and habits fitted him peculiarly for a certain kind of legal labor, and we have often heard our best lawyers say that no man in the State of Missouri could draw up a difficult contract or a complicated legal paper, with a correctness, conciseness and perfection which would reflect credit on every such act of his. He was a man of plain exterior, but gifted with most excellent judgment and the best practical sense. He was emphatically an honest man."

Enoch R. Borden.

Mr. ENOCH R. BORDEN, editor of the Trenton State Gazette, died at his residence in Trenton on Monday evening, in the fiftieth year of his age. During several months past Mr. BORDEN has been unable to perform his duties by reason of his increasing infirmities. For a quarter of a century he had been connected with the State Gazette, having entered the office as a compositor in 1844, becoming local reporter in 1851, and editor in 1853. He returned the post of editor, with the exception of two brief intervals, until his death.

Mr. BORDEN was Secretary of the New-Jersey Senate in 1865 and 1866, having previously been the Private Secretary of Gov. NEWELL, as well as an office-holder at Washington under President FILLMORE. These were the only public positions he ever held.

Mr. BORDEN had excellent capacities as an editor, and was thoroughly conversant with the history and the politics of the State. He was self-educated, and had acquired the extensive knowledge that he possessed by pursuing a systematic course of study while engaged in the work of his profession. He was a forcible writer and a conscientious journalist. The public men of the State knew him well, and there are few who have been conspicuous during the last twenty years who will not regret his death as that of a hearty, generous friend, or honorable critic. In his social relations he was gentlemanly, genial, always truthful and above every appearance of meanness. He never married, having lived for many years with his only relative—a sister—to whom he was almost entirely devoted. He was extremely popular in Trenton, and his burial today at Princeton will be attended, doubtless, by a large concourse of citizens.

Delaware Politics—The Call for Republican State Convention.

The call issued by the Republican State Executive Committee of Delaware, for State Convention in Dover, on Thursday, June 9, to nominate candidates for Governor and Congressman, declares that the citizens of Delaware now have an opportunity for a change of administration, and appeals to them not to waste it. The call is addressed to "The Republicans of the State of Delaware, and all who regard the long-disputed question of suffrage as definitely settled by the amendment of the National Constitution; who demand an essential change in the administration of the State Government, and the uprooting of the numerous corruptions and extravagances which characterize it; who insist on a reduction of the burdens of State taxation, now pressing unevenly and unequally upon the people; who desire an honest and economical collection and expenditure of the public moneys; who desire the reduction and extinction of the immense State debt, accumulated under the administration of the men now in power; who demand measures of relief for the struggling agricultural interests of the State; all who are now ready to join in an emphatic and earnest condemnation of the present tyrannical, odious, and intolerable Ring rule, which is preying upon the public vitals, and striking down the independent and manly citizenship of the State. And, in brief, all who are ready to seize the present great opportunity for a thorough and harmonious reform of the State Government, in behalf of the public interests, as against the private advantage of a few selfish, corrupt, and unscrupulous partisans."

The History of Soda-Water—Who Was the Originator of our Summer Drink?

To the Editor of the New-York Times:

In your issue of yesterday you gave a long dissertation on "Soda-water," wherein you attribute its first manufacture and sale at the City of Philadelphia, Penn., in the year 1807, to Dr. JAYNES. In this you are mistaken, and, for the purpose of the truth of history, I state that Dr. HAWKINS, a blind chemist, in the Spring of the year 1812, at the City of Philadelphia, Penn., manufactured and sold water there, and erected the first soda-water fountain ever put up in that city. Hodges, in a small two-story house, on the south side of Chestnut-street, the fourth or fifth house east of Second-street. I was then a boy of near sixteen years of age, and I assisted him in his manufactory of "soda-water"—then called "mineral water." I am only now desirous of "giving to Cesar that which belongs to Cesar." J. B. NORRIS.

Broadway Obstructions.

To the Editor of the New-York Times:

In today's paper you ask, Is there no relief to the stoppages on Broadway? I answer yes, to a very great extent. All teams, and especially loaded trucks, seek the best paved streets, even if they have to go out of their way, and these stoppages are generally below Canal-street. All the traffic concentrates through Canal-street into Broadway because that is the only street properly paved below Canal-street. Now if Centre, West Broadway and Hudson streets were properly paved, the tide would go up and down them, and so far relieve Broadway. If some of the zeal for ripping up cross streets and up-town streets were turned down-town, we would see less crowding on Broadway. I have driven on the streets of this City almost daily for twenty years, and I say that, while Hudson-street is the direct route down-town for the west side of the City, it is almost deserted, because it is so rough that a loaded truck can hardly get through it, and a light wagon will not.

DIAMOND SMUGGLING.

For some time past special endeavors have been made, on the part of Customs officials, to discover the manner in which diamonds and other precious stones, on which heavy import duties were imposed, were smuggled into this port. That such smuggling was carried on to a formidable extent has long been suspected, but it was conducted so secretly and systematically that it was found almost impossible to discover the persons who were engaged in it. Late on Monday afternoon, however, a rich Portuguese named GUIMARAES, acting as agent at Rio Janeiro, South America, for the firm of WEBSLER & WILSON, the well-known sewing-machine manufacturers, was arrested on a charge of having smuggled about $20,000 worth of diamonds into this port. His arrest was based on an affidavit made by Capt. JAMES CHALMER, an old Custom-house officer, and was made by Deputy Marshal TURNEY, assisted by Inspector HARRIGAN and Mr. JOHN COMKLING of the Custom-house. The accused was found at the private house No. 28 West Thirty-fifth-street. Acting under a search warrant issued by Commissioner BETTS, the Government officers proceeded to make investigation at the house, and subsequent to the capture of GUIMARAES, and succeeded in finding a large number of valuable diamonds. It was alleged that the entire lot had been brought into this City in a surreptitious way for the purpose of evading the Customs' regulations. During the search, a little girl attempted to escape from the house, but was intercepted by Inspector HASTINGS, and, on being examined, was found in possession of a casket containing diamonds valued at several thousand dollars. GUIMARAES was taken before Commissioner BETTS, and was held in $50,000 bail. Mr. F. W. STOUGHTON appeared as counsel for the prisoner. The latter, it is understood, was a resident of Rio Janeiro for many years. It was understood that an unsuccessful inspection was made of the office of the firm under whom GUIMARAES was employed, with a view of detecting smuggled property. It is said that the history of the diamond robbery which have been secured link by link by Capt. CHALMER and his associates, is very interesting, but that its disclosure at the present time would defeat the plans of the Government for bringing the culprits to justice.

The South Side (L. I.) Railroad and the Temperance Question.

At a recent meeting of the Blue Point Total Abstinence Society, a committee was appointed to wait upon the President of the South-side Railroad Company, CHAS. COX, Esq., and ascertain whether or not all or any of the engineers and other employes of that road, to whom the safety of the lives of the passengers is entrusted, are total abstainers from all intoxicating beverages, in order that this Society and through it the community may know whether or not there is a safely-conducted railroad on Long Island.

The President returned an answer favorable to the views of the Temperance Society, and issued the following notice:

"The use of intoxicating liquors, profane or obscene language or swearing by the employes of the South-side Railroad Company on Long Island, while on duty, is strictly forbidden." Whereupon the Blue Point Temperance Society passed resolutions expressive of their thanks to President COX for his hearty co-operation in the temperance cause, and assuring him that they will sustain him in the commendable stand he has taken in the matter.

Obtaining Goods on False Pretenses.

LUCIEN V. KNOWLES was arraigned before Justice HOGAN, yesterday, at the Tombs, on a charge of having used false pretenses in obtaining a bill of goods to the value of $154 on a draft purporting to have been drawn for $188 49 by JOHN R. FARWELL & CO., of Chicago, to the order of BENJAMIN KNOWES, and duly certified by the Metropolitan National Bank. The goods were duly delivered, but when the draft was presented for collection it was ascertained to be worthless, as the person in whose favor it had been drawn had received a duplicate, the original having been taken from the Post-office. KNOWLES obtained the goods on the 20th of last December, and when arrested yesterday freely admitted having taken a letter from the Post-office, and having signed the draft upon HENRY MCNEILL, of No. 52 Nassau-street, from whom he received the goods. Mr. RANDALL made the necessary affidavits, and the prisoner was fully committed for trial. KNOWLES resides at No. 245 Broome-street, and is a native of New-Portland, Me.

Hudson County Court of Sessions—Arraignments and Sentences.

In the Hudson County, N. J., Court of Special Sessions, yesterday, Judge RANDOLPH presiding Justice JOHN WHITE, of Hoboken, was arraigned upon two charges, one of extortion, in having charged $5 for issuing a warrant for the arrest of KEITELER, the Strasburg fugitive, and another of embezzlement, in having converted a part of the money taken from KEITELER to his own use. He pleaded not guilty to both charges. Upon the first he was held in $1,000 bail to answer; in the second he gave $5,000 bail.

The German, SIGISMUND SCHROEYER, who committed a rape upon a little girl four years of age, was arraigned for the indictment. He pleaded guilty to assault with intent to commit rape. He was immediately sentenced, after a short address by Judge RANDOLPH. His Honor alluded to the enormity of the crime, and to the loathsome consequences by which it had been followed. The sentence of the Court was that the prisoner be confined in the State Prison at hard labor for twenty years.

FRANCIS LEWIS and WM. JELLER, who had been convicted of grand larceny, were sentenced each to three years' imprisonment in the State Prison.

Heavy Defalcation in Sussex County.

Mr. JOHN F. DUNN, of Newton, Sussex County, N. J., a prominent citizen and a member of the Board of Chosen Freeholders, has disappeared with $16,000 borrowed and raised in various ways, it is said, among his neighbors, every one of whom had confidence in his integrity. He had born an excellent character as a man of correct business habits. He had been engaged in the stove and tin trade and had suffered some losses. He leaves a family who are ignorant of his whereabouts.

Mount Sinai Hospital.

A correspondent informs us that we were wrong in stating that the Mount Sinai Hospital is maintained by our Jewish citizens, for the benefit of persons of their own faith. He says: "The institution is supported by Jewish contributions, and its directors belong to that persuasion, but it has always opened its doors to patients without the slightest regard to creed. Jew and Gentile receive equal care and attention within its wards."

Important Will Case at Trenton, N. J.—Indictments by the Grand Jury.

The May term of the Court of Chancery commenced today, with fifty cases on the list. The most important case is that of MARTHA B. STEVENS and others vs. WM. B. SHIPPEN and others. This is a suit for the construction of the will of the late EDWIN A. STEVENS, of Hoboken, to have the Court determine whether certain charitable bequests, and the gift of the Stevens Battery to the State of New-Jersey, are valid. A resolution is now pending in Congress authorizing New-Jersey to receive this war vessel, and the case is not to be argued until after Congress has acted upon it. The amount involved appears by the report the interest of the State and Hon. LEON ABBOTT for the executors, and the children of the testator. The amount involved in the bequest in the dispute is over $2,000,000. The case has been set down for argument on June 14 at Jersey City.

In the United States District Court, today, the following persons were indicted by the Grand Jury, and pleaded not guilty: John Williams, for smuggling $20,000 worth of diamonds; Wm. G. Obst, for stealing mail matter and partaking contents at the various Post-offices in Gloucester and Cumberland Counties; Thomas Kelly, being engaged in rectifying spirits without license. The recognizances of Thomas J. Harlyand and John McNeason were forfeited.

"WOMAN'S RIGHT" TO DIVORCE

Mrs. E. C. Stanton's Address on the McFarland Case—The Wife Defended and the Laws Pronounced Unjust—General Discussion—A Final Rally from Beecher.

In response to the public notices that Mrs. E. C. STANTON would lecture at Apollo Hall on the merits of the McFarland case, an anxious crowd began to assemble yesterday at the place appointed an hour before the stated time—11 o'clock. The presence of one sole gray-haired masculine marred whatever of harmonious effect might have been produced by an immense assemblage of sharp-visaged, gaunt-figured females, relieved here and there by a bare sprinkling of pretty young women, and few and then a matronly-looking one comfortably fleshy and jolly enough to indicate that she fed not on philosophies, nor hugged new-fangled notions to her heart.

Tremendous stamping of strong-minded, or, to say the least, stone-soled boots, betokened great impatience as Mrs. STANTON's hour drew near, but at last, a little after the period named for the lecture, the imposing presence of the lady speaker was greeted with applause unbounded. Her silvery white hair, disdainful of dyes, clustered in ringlets which shed a halo around her ruddy face, while the "back hair" did not defy the prevailing mode—assuming the hickory-nut task affected by some women with thoughts above feminine beautifying, but was disposed in a bona fide chignon of moderate size, bound by a ribbon of Persian green. Mrs. STANTON's dress was black—not indeed, such as I have worn and her figure was enveloped in a shawl of rich black lace. So much for externals.

The speaker was introduced to the audience by Miss ANTHONY, who announced that Mrs. STANTON was responsible for at least one-half the benefits conferred on the world during her career. It was the first time she (Miss ANTHONY) had ever appeared before an audience composed solely of women. So they must not be surprised if they found her somewhat embarrassed under the ordeal. A few more preliminaries, and Mrs. STANTON arrived at "What occurred in characteristic connection" the fast-approaching era of woman's emancipation, &c.," and she lady seated herself, while beneath the overshadowing presence of LIZZIE and WEBER, as conceived and set forth by a New-York artist, the dulcet tones of Mrs. STANTON'S voice were heard.

Hurrying to take her subjectity the forelock Mrs. STANTON said that combative of the "free love" accusations brought against her, she would assert in the outset that she had lived with one man, her husband, thirty years, and that if any had questions to ask further concerning this, she was willing that the record of her married life should answer. For the McFarland trial, said Mrs. STANTON, it decided a wondrously important question to the whole civilized world. She (Mrs. STANTON) reasoned abstractly and without prejudice, having never seen the face either of the husband or the happy woman, who is or was his wife. She had grown from childhood to womanhood, with all her prejudices in favor of her own sex; but, coming subsequently to wifehood and motherhood, she only asked, in God's name, let truth govern, and give to man and woman equal rights. She would not crave for her sons and daughters without distinction in regard to sex. Mrs. STANTON had, years ago, she said, wept over the cruel fate of negro BURNS—captured and remanded to Southern slavery, and now, at a much later day, it was with a kindred feeling she had solemnly pondered as the midnight hour on the shameless story of ABBY MCFARLAND, crouching beneath the howlings of the Press, the deprecations of the pulpit, the defamation of scandal-mongers and the uncharity in numberless instances of her sister woman. The speaker would not have MCFARLAND, the party hanged; he had been, she had been found guilty by the jury and sent to pass his days—for the safety of the community—in an insane asylum. [Shouts and cheers.] ABBY MCFARLAND could not testify at the late trial, for neither women nor slaves can testify against a lover supposed masters, but it was sound, enhanced by time and there at Apollo Hall evinced that there was sympathy enough at least to sustain the wronged woman in breaking her allegiance to a blasted drunkard and a diseased libertine. [Cheers.] We must have new laws, my fellow-women, urged the speaker, and we must not say "The law may do so and so," but it must be "The law must do so and so." We sympathize with the woman whose cause comes up before us today, but it is only of little world without action. Let women see where to strike the blow—enlighten them that they may see. Let them see that a maniac must not be turned loose on society if his mind is bent on murder. He will commit other murders. New-York State knows, many of them will return to society, and, in the modest Mrs. MCFARLAND's life is not safe, and Mrs. MCFARLAND is deprived of the guardianship of her own children. Ask yourselves if this ought to be the verdict against a woman brought to trial for the wrong done by another—that other, the maniac and murderer, who ought to have been hanged. [Applause.] Anomalous decision! Who could believe, with all the evidence before them, that ABBY MCFARLAND regarded her tie to DANIEL MCFARLAND a sacred one? Reform! Reform! Reform! in the marriage laws we called for hour by hour of this our day, for women were no better off in the matter of divorce than they were five centuries ago. She knew women in this assembly who were today laboring to support husbands in the insane asylums—rendered insane by the beastly habits of intoxication—that had made hells of these same women's homes. And yet New-York City had there found one husband and wife. Think of this, and think of the case of the stricken woman who is now a target for the nation's scorn! It was sin—not toscparate—but sin for man and woman to live together in antagonism. Lust and not love presided over such alliances. HUMBOLDT, JEREMY BENTHAM, CHARLOTTE BROOKS and JOHN STUART MILL were all quoted in support of the proposition. ABBY MCFARLAND's married life was legalized prostitution, and severance from her husband was the first commendable step therein. Her great mistake was in forming another tie, but in such a state she found herself in, some modicum of the most agonizing character. Early yesterday morning death put an end to his sufferings.

motion, and I confirmed his decision and concurred in his view that it was discretionary whether to grant an order, and what cause should be shown for it. In the present case the Register, in the exercise of his discretion, thought proper to grant the order, without requiring a petition or affidavit duly verified showing good cause for granting the same. Nothing appears to show that that discretion was improperly exercised, and the order must stand. The time to examine the bankrupt does not expire with the making of his application for his discharge.

For the bankrupt, Mr. Seward; for the creditors, Mr. Lord.

TUESDAY, May 17—P. M.

The action of the House of Representatives yesterday is conclusive that nothing will be done with the Tariff this session. Our own prediction on the subject early in the Spring are thus verified. We claim no credit for coming out right about the result, because it was then plain that the country was in no haste for a general revision of the Tariff, nor the Treasury in a condition to do without the exceptional duties, incident to the war, upon Coffee and Tea, about which there should be the least dispute whenever they can be spared, because affecting, directly, the greatest number of consumers.

Mr. SCHENCK has now brought forward his Internal Tax bill, for the reduction of a large number of taxes effecting Railway, Savings, Insurance, and other Corporations, Merchant sales, Succession legacies, &c., and for the continuance of the Income tax at 5 ₱ cent., but with the larger exemption of $1,500. It would not be safe to predict the fate of this measure, or to anticipate either the partial or radical changes which the Bill will undergo in either House of Congress. It will not be forgotten that the President, in his Annual Message, and the Secretary of the Treasury in his Report, last December, recommended that the Internal Revenues, as well as the Tariff, should be left undisturbed for another year. So far as the Tariff is concerned the question is settled, pursuant to this recommendation, and no doubt to the popular satisfaction. In regard to the Internal Revenues, there was some months since, and indeed up to a very recent period, such a pressure for reduction that Mr. SHERMAN, of the Finance Committee of the Senate, and the House Committee of Ways and Means have moved in this direction, the first for $45,000,000 and the last for $33,000,000 per annum. Both select substantially the same objects for relief, the principal difference being one of degree on the Income tax. Should both Bills fail, between the two Houses, the whole subject will go over to the December session, except as to the Joint Resolution, now in Committee of Conference between the two Houses for continuing the Income tax another year.

There will unquestionably be wide differences of opinion outside of Congress as well as among its members as to the wisdom or discrimination, and also as to the fairness of the selection of the objects of the proposed relief. These differences will especially affect the great monied corporations and Railway Companies. The latter are now only taxed on their gross receipts for passengers. They were some three years ago relieved of the tax upon their freight traffic, to the loss of a large revenue from this source to the Treasury, and to no profit to the people, as far as we are advised, in cheapening transportation to or from the West. It is even doubtful whether the stockholders have gained anything thereby, in the economy of administration. And judging by this experience as to the release of the tax on freights, we should say that the public at large have very little interest in the removal of the tax on gross receipts from passengers.

As to the other corporations, including the Savings Banks, we confess we do not appreciate the necessity or fairness of the proposed exemptions. They are all making money, in the gross, and should be prosperous, as we believe most of them are in this vicinity, and none more so, as their rapid multiplication and recently enhanced dividends show, than the Savings Banks, to say nothing of the business of insurance, &c., carried on by association or incorporation.

The Income tax, against which the clamor of the Press has been more general than the other taxes proposed to be relinquished, is to be continued, if the House Bill should pass, at the old rate, with a modification as to incomes under $1,500, which will work relief to the extent of about $5,700,000. We have always held the Income tax as one of the justest and fairest, (if fairly administered,) of all the Internal taxes, because only exacted where the ability to pay it is manifest by assured profits or prosperity; but if in the general readjustment of the Internal Revenues, two ₱ cent. of the present five ₱ cent. rate can be spared, making the new rate three ₱ cent., we believe the change would be generally popular; more so than to do away with the tax altogether, at present.

The settlement of the Tariff question for the present session of Congress, and the probability that no bill on the subject will pass at the December session, to take effect before the 1st of July, 1871, will enable the Importing interest to shape their business for the next twelve or fourteen months with something like assured certainty. Trade in Foreign Merchandise is now running ahead of last year, and it is a reasonable calculation that a further improvement will be experienced after the close of the present Fiscal Year. The Customs Duties being the same for the three fiscal years 1869, 1870, and 1871, we shall be disappointed from the present look of trade, if the year 1871—from July 1, 1870, to June 30, 1871—does not yield over two hundred millions Gold as Customs Revenue. The present year will yield about $190,000,000, or 6 ₱ cent. in excess of the previous fiscal year, as follows:

First quarter	$40,028,804	$35,548,922
Second quarter	36,900,423	41,206,147
Third quarter	49,389,534	48,196,911
Fourth quarter	44,661,365	*48,000,000
Total for year	$190,000,625	$190,102,980

*Partly estimated.

There was increased firmness in all the Wall-street markets today, except for Money, which continues to rule cheap and in easy supply. The Exchange on London was advanced to 109¼ ₱ cent. 60 days, and 110¼@110½ per cent., sight, and by sympathy, the Gold Room was partially stiffer, though not selling over 114¼@115 ₱ cent. The Public Funds were ¼ ₱ cent. higher than yesterday, and a much larger business done. The Southern State Bonds were in fair demand and prices, with one or two exceptions, higher. There is rather more doing, also, in the Railway Mortgages, both of the old and new creation. In the Railway Stocks there was active buoyancy in nearly all the New-York and Western lines, New-York Central Stock and Scrip leading the speculation, followed by the strong reaction in Rock Island, North-Wests and Ohios, of which we noticed the premonitory signs last night. Lake Shore also turned upward again, and Toledo and Wabash was quite active. In the Miscellaneous Stocks the business was not very large, but prices firm for Western Telegraph, the Express Stocks, Mariposa Preferred and Canton, and the sales of Pacific Mail ¼@1 ₱ cent. higher than yesterday.

The highest figures of the day on the Railway Market were made between the Morning and Afternoon Boards. There was some realising manifested at the last Board, and after the adjournment the Long Room was feverish and prices irregular, finally closing as follows compared with Monday night:

NEWS OF THE DAY.

EUROPE.

ESPARTERO has addressed a letter to Gen. PRIM declining to be a candidate for the Spanish throne on account of his advanced age. The settlement of the monarchy question is urged by the Press, and anxiety for the termination of the provisional status increases. The bill authorizing civil marriages has passed the Cortes by a vote of 142 to 34....The ceremony of officially announcing to the Emperor the result of the recent vote in France will take place in presence of the great bodies of the State. The Paris Constitutionnel demands the rigorous enforcement of the laws against attacks upon the Constitution, and that full penalties be imposed upon the members of the International Working Man's Society. Arrests for complicity in the conspiracy continue. A native of Belgium was discovered among the French voters, and he was arrested, and expelled from the country. The changes in the Ministry are regarded with surprise and a good deal of dissatisfaction in Paris.... A Rome dispatch says it is in contemplation to canonize CHRISTOPHER COLUMBUS....The Neapolitan insurrection has been suppressed.... A Paris dispatch says that the French Government has notified the Government of Greece that if Frenchmen are captured by Greek bandits, Greece shall pay the ransom....The Theatrical Fund dinner was given in London on Monday night, with the Prince of WALES in the chair.... The London Poor Law Board has decided that women cannot lawfully act as Parish Guardians, thus ruling out Miss BURDETT COUTTS from that office in the Parish of Bethnal Green.

CONGRESS.

In the Senate, yesterday, the Fifteenth Amendment bill again occupied about the whole of the session. During the debate Mr. REVELS made another speech. No action was taken on the bill, and a motion to take up the House bill on the subject was negatived. The morning hour was devoted to a debate on a bill providing for the relinquishment by the Government of its interest to certain lands in San Francisco, which was finally passed. At 5 o'clock the Senate went into Executive Session and subsequently adjourned.

In the House a discussion of the bill to revive commerce consumed the morning hour. Mr. WOOD made an extended speech, in which he claimed that it was not commerce which was on the decline, but navigation, that is, shipbuilding, one of the industries of the country. He cited several causes for this decline, and then briefly reviewed the bill, which, he urged, did not cure, but simply palliated the evil complained of. He was followed by Mr. WASHBURN in support of the measure, and the bill then went over for the day. Of the miscellaneous business transacted, two petitions were presented and referred for the impeachment of Judge FIELD, of the United States Supreme Court, and of Judge HOFFMAN, of the District Court of California. Among the bills introduced was one for the reorganization of the Judicial districts of this State. Late in the afternoon the Naval Appropriation bill was taken up. The debate which ensued was continued until 4½, when a recess was taken. At the evening session the debate on the bill was continued until adjournment, which took place at 10 o'clock, there being no quorum present.

GENERAL.

According to advices from Mexico to May 10, the insurgents were repulsed in an attack upon the town of Tuchipila, and had also sustained a defeat in Cuernavaca. A rupture has occurred between the Governor and the Legislature of Jalisco. A number of highwaymen have been executed. The newly-discovered placers are attracting miners from Mexico.

A Toronto dispatch says troops are being rapidly pushed forward to Red River. Several companies of the Sixteenth Rifles leave here today. It is stated in Ottawa that Mr. ARCHIBALD, M. P., from Nova Scotia, is appointed Lieutenant-Governor of Manitoba, and will soon proceed thence and assume the duties of such office.

The entire business portion of Henderson, N. C., was destroyed by fire yesterday morning. The loss is estimated at $60,000. The fire is believed to have been caused by an incendiary.

The General Conference of the Methodist Church South, at Memphis, yesterday discussed the subject of removing the Book Concern. In the course of the debate it was intimated that the condition of the Concern would not bear investigation. This was denied by several speakers.

A mass-meeting, composed of white and colored persons, and members of all parties, was held in Charleston, S. C., on the 16th inst., to organize a movement toward retrenchment in the State Government. The officers of the meeting were chosen regardless of color.

A new liquor bill has been reported in the Massachusetts Senate, which allows the sale of lager-beer, and provides for sales of liquors by druggists and apothecaries for medicinal, mechanical and chemical purposes, such persons not to sell to minors or on Sunday, except on the prescription of a physician. The Liquor Commissioner is required absolutely to import his foreign liquors, and not to do so under the direction of another, and he must purchase his domestic liquors direct from the manufacturers who are authorized to sell to him.

A serious break in the Erie Canal occurred yesterday morning at the dry dock, one mile above Whitesboro. One boat was carried through the tow-path. About one hundred feet of the track of the New-York Central Railroad was carried away, and no trains can pass until the damage is repaired, which will take several days.

The Governor has vetoed the bill to incorporate the New-York Annuity Company and the bill to amend the act to simplify proceedings in the State Courts, the latter on the ground of careless wording, which might be construed to permit the appointment of several stenographers where only one is needed.

A wealthy Portuguese named GUIMARAES, acting as agent at Rio Janeiro of WHEELER & WILSON, the well-known sewing-machine manufacturers, was arrested late on Monday afternoon on a charge of having smuggled several thousand dollars' worth of diamonds into this port. He gave bail in $60,000 to appear for examination before Commissioner BETTS.

The election in this City and State, yesterday, resulted in the return of the Democratic candidates for Judges of the Court of Appeals, by a majority of about 70,000. The majority in the City for Aldermen is about ——.

The annual election for Directors of the Mercantile Library Association took place at Clinton Hall yesterday. It was an unusually exciting affair, and resulted in the choice of the regular ticket by a vote of 675 out of a total of 1,176.

At a meeting of the Quarantine Commissioners yesterday, Dr. CARNOCHAN made some important statements in regard to the prevalence of yellow-fever, and as to the necessary steps to be taken to guard against a spread of the disease.

Mrs. E. C. STANTON delivered an address at Apollo Hall yesterday, before a large gathering of ladies and one old gentleman, in which she ventilated very fully her views of the McFarland case.

The People and the Taxes.

For any approach to relief , in the shape of reduced taxation, we are disposed to be duly grateful. So far as the session of Congress has yet gone, the odds have seemed nearly all against the people. Trifling matters have been discussed with great prolixity, and measures not called for have been allowed to absorb the time which properly belonged to important public interests. Funding has occupied attention that should have been devoted to reform; the battle of the Tariff has been waged in opposition to fresh demands, rather than in furtherance of thorough, scientific revision and amendment. There has been cause for dissatisfaction, perhaps even for disgust. The prospect of some benefit, afforded by the almost simultaneous presentation of bills for the reduction of taxes, in the Senate and House, comes, therefore, with a certain unexpectedness which may moderate if it does not disarm hostile criticism. Thankfulness for small mercies was never more befitting than now.

The events of the last few days have shown, however, that in the present instance an appreciation of benefits promised is not incompatible with a hopeful effort to make them larger. The Ways and Means Committee is not absolute master of the fiscal situation. It only proposes, the House disposes. The revolt of influential Republicans against the attempt to waste further time upon a Tariff bill which has not the remotest chance of success, indicates the growth of an influence favorable to wholesome changes in any measure reported from the Committee. Its judgment does not carry the impress of infallibility—sparcely of power. We may be sure, therefore, that the Tax bill brought forward by Mr. SCHENCK will be freely handled; and in this prospect we see an assurance of changes which will bring the measure into closer harmony with the measure prepared by the Senate Finance Committee.

The most essential difference between the schemes is in the amount of relief they are calculated, respectively, to afford. The House bill contemplates a reduction of taxes amounting in round numbers to thirty-three millions; the reduction effected by the Senate bill would be some ten millions more. If there were any doubt as to the ability of the Treasury to sustain a diminution of its resources, to an extent not exceeding the larger of these amounts, there might be excuse for hesitation in determining a preference. But the fact is that the forty-three millions reduction contemplated by the Senate Committee is far below both the capacity of the Treasury and the expectation of the country. It is safe to say that a margin of at least sixty millions is available for revenue reduction, without impairing the ability of the Government to comply with the requirements of law in regard to the sinking fund. A margin of a hundred millions might, we believe, be shown to be available, as a whole; and deducting from this twenty-five millions, as a contribution to the sinking fund, seventy-five millions would remain as the measure of the extent to which taxes might be reduced. Keeping in view possible contingencies as a result of industrial depression or financial exigencies, we assign sixty millions as the minimum of reduction which a Congress intent only on benefiting the people would endeavor to realize.

Evidently, then, the scheme of the Ways and Means Committee but half performs the work that is wanted. We are entitled to sixty millions reduction, and we are promised thirty-three. The Senate bill is better by ten millions. And the latter probably constitutes the basis upon which Republicans may most usefully conduct their opposition to Mr. SCHENCK's proposition. For the radical difference between them is confined to a single point. In their general scope they agree. The dissimilarity begins when the income tax comes in question—a circumstance we consider favorable to the equable readjustment of a tax which has been made specially odious by the oppressiveness of its rate, and the unnecessary annoyances of its administration.

The difference is not as to the continuance or abrogation of the income tax. On that head the Committees are united. Both wisely propose to abolish taxes which interfere more with the operations of trade, and to continue a charge upon incomes as a legitimate and productive source of revenue. The Senate bill contemplates the continuance of the five per cent. rate only during the present year,—the rate to be afterward reduced to three per cent., and the exemption to be as now. The House bill, on the other hand, enlarges the exemption, and divests the tax of many of its inquisitorial aspects, but makes permanent the five per cent. rate. Out of this difference grow the ten millions, more or less, which indicate the degrees of relief to be afforded the taxpayers by the legislation contemplated. In other words, Mr. SCHENCK would exact ten millions more through the income tax than would be exacted by the Senate scheme. The additional relief he holds out by an increase of the income exempted is much more than counteracted by the maintenance of the present extravagant rate upon the incomes subject to assessment. This is the condemnation of the Schenck bill.

We can imagine few greater mistakes than the re-imposition of the existing tax, or the re-enactment of any income tax without a thorough consideration of the many points it involves. The public is long-suffering, but it will not bear with patience a tax that is oppressive in its amount, unequal and unjust in its operation, and beset with appliances which are vexatious and unnecessary. A continuance of the income tax, then, should be resolved upon only in conjunction with a purpose to mitigate its weight, and free it from harshness and injustice. The latter object is in a large degree effected by the House bill, which abrogates the inquisitorial features of the present law. But both bills perpetuate the distinctive outrage of the system as it is, by ignoring the sources of income in the adjustment of burdens. Both keep alive the wrong inseparable from the exaction of the same rate of taxation from capitalists, possessed of solid investments, yielding a steady and enduring income, and from that enormous body whose incomes vary with the exigencies of trade or health, and are terminable at any moment. To disregard the obvious distinction which exists between these classes of income is to inflict injustice upon the vast army of workers, and to confer upon realized wealth an advantage to which it is not entitled.

A five per cent. income tax has no justification in the practice of other countries or the necessities of our own. Two per cent. levied upon all incomes derived from labor or trade, and three per cent. levied upon incomes above a fixed amount—say, ten thousand dollars—would meet the wants of the Government, and at least approximate to justice. As for exemptions, a thousand dollars would seem to be enough, together with some fixed sum on account of rent. The present plan, which exempts any rent, however high, is absurd and unfair. These reforms are not simply possible: they are indispensable if the injustice of the system now in force is to be terminated, and if the people are to be reconciled to a tax which clumsy legislation and prolonged maladministration have rendered all but intolerable.

The Result of the Election.

The returns from yesterday's election indicate beyond all question that the Democratic Judicial ticket has been elected by a large majority. An examination of the returns shows a large falling off in the Republican vote, and an average poll by the Democrats. The result is, of course, not unexpected, although it is one which is much to be regretted. The causes which led to it have already been fully explained in these columns. The very general apathy which existed among our Republican friends throughout the State is due largely to the fact that no political emergency called for their interference, or at least no such condition of things as was likely to stimulate the party to combined effort.

The Republican Party is a party of earnest convictions and of strong impulses, but it lacks severe discipline and that readiness to respond to the call of leaders which make the Democracy strong. It requires an urgent necessity to stir the average Republican to an active discharge of his political duty; and in the absence of such a stimulus he is careless almost to indifference. The result is that while he is conscious of the importance of success, he will not work for it where there is little or nothing beyond the ultimate moral effect of defeat involved, as was the case yesterday. This is not from any lack of intelligent appreciation of the importance of securing a pure and exalted Judiciary, but simply of an inertness which could not be overcome in the present canvass.

Undoubtedly the fact that both tickets were made up of good men, and that the minority was sure to be represented by two Justices in any event, had much to do with the general torpor which was manifested. The result cannot, therefore, properly be invested with any particular significance, as a popular expression of sentiment. Of course the Democratic journals will eagerly claim it as an evidence of reactionary feeling, and as a rebuke of the Administration, but such pretenses will deceive no one—not even Democrats themselves. Every intelligent political observer knows better, and hence, in this respect at least, the mischief which might otherwise have been apprehended from a Democratic victory will not be experienced.

So far as the municipal canvass is concerned, but one result was possible. The Tammany nominees for Aldermen were elected, and most of the Assistant Aldermen. Notwithstanding the apparent quiet which prevailed, the vote was large,—nearly, if not quite, as large as at the last November election,—and it is evident that, despite the new Election law, there was about the usual amount of repeating and other frauds. This was not from any defect in the law, but from a neglect of an organized enforcement of it. The utter hopelessness of success kept thousands of Republicans in this City from voting at all, and served to swell the general majority on the Judicial ticket.

There is but one lesson to be derived from yesterday's election, and that is the absolute necessity of a more thorough and efficient organization of the Republican Party in this State, and a fuller recognition by every Republican voter of his political duty. It is idle to hope for municipal reform or for that assured success which of right belongs to us, without these changes. If the result of yesterday's election shall lead to reforms long needed, our defeat will be far from a disadvantage in the end. We need harmonious and effective organization in this City, and a more efficient central management for the whole State; and unless we can secure them and infuse into the body of the Republican Party a more vigorous sense of duty, the favorable auspices of victory next Fall, which now exist, will prove a delusion and a snare.

National Courtesy.

When the Canadian Government, after concluding a very advantageous bargain with the Hudson Bay Company for the transfer of its jurisdiction over the Red River country, dispatched thither a Governor and suite to rule over the newly-acquired territory and its people, there proceeded from our own people a very general expression of opinion that the proceeding was unnecessarily arbitrary. Although it was a matter in which we had no direct interest, and with which we could not properly meddle, yet, when the people of Winnipeg resisted the pretensions of their new rulers, and refused to recognize them, we very naturally applauded their resolution. When the Dominion authorities proceeded to organize a military expedition to chastise the insurgents, and asked the privilege of sending it across our territory by way of St. Paul, the request was very properly refused; and we should have approved a refusal to send the same force through the Sault Ste. Marie Canal.

The situation has since been very materially changed. The most liberal concessions have been made to the insurgents, and entire harmony restored by the passage of the act to erect the new Provincial Government of Manitoba. The armed expedition, originally intended for purposes of hostility to the settlers, is now being sent in their interests, and to protect them against the Indians. This fact presents an entirely new phase of the affair, and the request that the expedition should be permitted to pass through the Sault Canal was one which simply involved a question of national courtesy, and it may be of humanity. Of course, the authorities at the Sault were justified, in the absence of specific instructions, in refusing the permission. It would have been improper for them to have assumed so great a responsibility; but now that the facts have been properly presented at Washington, the desired permission is cheerfully granted.

We are aware that there is a strong feeling among our own people that we were badly treated by the Canadians during the rebellion, and that we are under no obligations of courtesy to them. They afforded many prominent rebels an asylum, and permitted them to organize raids across the border. They notably betrayed their sympathy with the rebellion in the case of the St. Albans raiders, and one of their Judges—COURSAL—compromised the administration of justice to shield them. Still, we know that those demonstrations were not generally participated in by the Canadian authorities, and we recall several instances of official interference in our behalf by notifications being sent to us of intended raids in full time to enable our Government to frustrate them. Even admitting that our neighbors were against us during our civil war, the circumstance would not justify anything like retaliation in the present instance. Such a course would be inconsistent with our policy toward them since the war, as manifested in the recent Fenian disturbances, and moreover it would be inimical to the best interests of the people of Manitoba, with whom we cannot but sympathize.

The New Board of Health.

The delay in the departmental organization of the Board of Health of this City gives rise to grave fears for the sanitary welfare of the people. Standing as it does upon the threshold of the Summer season, and confronted by two epidemics—small-pox and relapsing fever—and innumerable nuisances detrimental to the public health, it seems a matter of the first necessity that this Board should immediately secure a most effective organization. If the delay were due to precautions taken to secure the most competent men for the various branches of its service, we might well wait patiently; but we believe that the truth is otherwise, and that the Board is higgling about the claims of this and that political leader who desires to have his favorites placed in office.

We desire to say plainly to the Board of Health that the community has claims upon it which far transcend those of the mere politician or office-seeker. This fact was recognized by the Mayor when he announced the appointment of the members of this Commission. It was distinctly asserted in his proclamation that the Board of Health was placed above the influence of political partizanship. If, as we fear, it is, in its incipient organization, being sacrificed to party considerations, the Commissioners are violating the solemn pledges of the Mayor to the people of New-York.

For our own part, we desire to see the new Board emulate the good example of its predecessor, in selecting men for their especial fitness for particular duties. As a matter of fact, the former Board had as many Democrats as Republicans in office; the Commission was two to one Republican. For the department of mere business, like Street Cleaning, give us a business man, thoroughly familiar with organizing and executing work; for the Sanitary Permit Bureau, select an efficient and honest inspector of the old corps, whose qualifications have been tested; for Registrar, we must have a student of vital statistics, of acknowledged ability, capable of solving the most abstruse problems, and thus giving character to the Board, at home and abroad. For Chemist, no mere trading apothecary will answer, but a man of the highest standing should be chosen; for Sanitary Engineer, there is a pressing necessity for a person thoroughly familiar with the topography of the island, and familiar with the best systems of drainage.

But it may be asked, can such men be obtained? We answer, Yes. Their names are as familiar as household words, and their selection would give the utmost satisfaction to the general public. We trust that the Board will awake to a sense of its responsibilities to the people, discard the petty claims of party, and at once choose the best men for the best places.

Baths for the Million.

We trust the authorities will condescend to give us public baths. The fact that "cleanliness" is so near to "godliness" may make the experiment distasteful in some quarters, but there is no fear that any amount of water, taken externally, will seduce the honest Democratic masses from their fidelity to JEFFERSON's principles and JACKSON's practice, or that the "great unwashed" will vote any the less often for being Republicanized in looks. Dirt and Democracy are not so indissolubly allied as some people suppose, but dirt and disease are. And waiving the question whether the local Democracy may not be considered a form of disease, it is quite certain that a pestilence would materially lessen the political majority in the City. Self-interest, therefore, if not considerations of humanity, should impel the Tammany managers to grant us the boon so long asked for.

Even if we are too poor to afford free public baths, a very small admission fee would suffice to support without greatly depopularizing them, and leave besides a pretty fair margin for the politicians. And then the number of sinecures their care would furnish for worthy but invalid Democrats; the snug berths for Ex-Assemblymen and other party hacks! The worthy Municipality ought to act without delay. If Mayor HALL would only throw in the weight of his influence, we should have good ground for anticipating success. He is certainly not deficient in enterprise or public spirit, and there is a fine opportunity now before him to confer a benefit upon the poor which they would most heartily appreciate.

The West and the Capital.

The West is decidedly earnest in its effort to have the national capital removed from Washington to some point nearer the geographical center of the country. It is now proposed to hold a convention at Cincinnati on the 5th of October, to be composed of delegates from all the States and Territories, in the proportion of three delegates to each Congressional District, together with six delegates at large from each State, and three from each Territory,—all to be appointed by the Governors thereof. So large a body could not fail to possess considerable influence, although it is questionable if it could be brought to any harmonious expression, unless it should be packed in the interest of a removal. It is hardly to be expected that a project involving so large an expenditure will be adopted in the present financial condition of the country. It will be many years before we shall be in a position to try the experiment, and then it is probable we shall have made so many additional outlays that the capital will be regarded as a permanency at Washington. The mere question of convenience of access is a matter of minor importance in this age of railroads, and we doubt if the project will ever be successful on that plea alone. Still, there can be no objection to giving the subject a full and fair discussion, if that be the wish of a large proportion of the people. Such a discussion will probably strengthen the conviction that the proposed undertaking is quite impracticable.

Striking Gas.

Complaints respecting the treatment of the public by gas companies are continuous, both on the ground of extortion and the inferior quality of the article they supply. It will be some consolation to the grumblers to know that there actually seems a chance that we may by and by get gas, like petroleum, "out of the bowels of the harmless earth." Certain it is that a gas well has been found in the township of West Bloomfield, Ontario County, New-York, some twenty miles south of Rochester. The owner of the ground struck the gas at a depth of five hundred feet, while boring for petroleum. The bore-hole is now tubed down, we are told, to and into the solid rock, and the tube, which is five inches in diameter, stands some ten feet above the surface. Through this there comes about four hundred thousand cubic feet of gas a day. The flow has gone on for four years, and, on the testimony of residents, without any perceptible diminution of energy. This would make, in all, an escape of about six hundred millions cubic feet, or one-half the yearly manufacture of our largest Company, the Manhattan. The bore hole is supposed to terminate in what is called the Marcellus shale, and some think this discovery is but the prelude to still more wonderful discoveries. Of course all great "finds," whether of gold, petroleum, or other earthly treasures, are likely to be at the outset on a small scale; but who shall tell what revolutionary consequences may ensue if future discoveries of natural gas bear a parallel relation to those of coal, or other substances derived from the soil? The illumination of our streets and buildings would be cheap indeed, if every family could have a gas well in its back yard, and the monthly inspection of the meter would be less dreaded than at present.

Gustave Flourens.

Have the plebeians got to the top and the aristocrats to the bottom in the French Empire? We all know about Count HENRI DE ROCHEFORT DE LUCAY, descendant of a crusader, &c., but it is quite a new sensation to find that FLOURENS, the magnanimous and the valiant, is the eldest son of a peer of France—one who was moreover a scholar and a philosopher. GUSTAVE appears to have had a constitutional taste for revolution. At four-and-twenty he went to assist the Poles in 1863; at five-and-twenty he lectured at the College of France, and was the idol of the budding atheists of that institution; a year later he was stirring up the fierce democracy of Belgium; still later he was campaigning in Crete; after that he turns up in Italy, which he soon made too hot for him, and returning to Paris two years ago, he began that brilliant career which culminated in the great episode of the sword, the pistol and the flight. What remains in store for him is uncertain. So far he has shown no lack of prudence, and he does not seem likely to suffer the penalties which ROCHEFORT has incurred. As for the story of the correspondent of a contemporary being led into a plot by M. FLOURENS, no one believes a word of it. It is not at all certain that M. FLOURENS himself committed any greater offense than one of political indiscretion, while the correspondent acted in the spirit of sincere friendship.

City Transit.

The chances of our enjoying swift means of transit up and down Manhattan Island at an early day look decidedly slender at present, although the need for such accommodation is constantly growing more pressing. The defeat of the Arcade project, and the unlucky accident on Monday to the West Side Elevated Railroad, coming, as it were, together, have had an effect on the prospects of rapid City locomotion which is the reverse of encouraging. Perhaps, a compromise of different schemes will, after all, be ultimately adopted. We may possess an underground railway without having it under Broadway. And such a work may be carried as far as about Fortieth-street, where the greatest difficulties in the way of excavation begin, and may emerge there, connecting with a line above ground for further progress northward. While discussing this subject, we may observe that some fears lately expressed by one of the morning papers, to the effect that the engines of an underground railway would frighten horses and cause mischief in the streets above, is quite without foundation. Our contemporary's apprehensions were apparently inspired by its rational and vigorously-expressed distaste for the Arcade bill; but this particular alarm is needless. Whatever is done on the line of the London Subterranean Railway is absolutely inaudible in the streets above; so that neither horses nor any other creatures are ever likely to be scared by underground traffic.

It is a sign of the moderate temper of our Republican Representatives in Congress that they declined to carry out the suggestion of Senator MORTON, to settle the policy and tactics of the approaching elections in caucus. This is no fitting time for taking so important a step. The political affairs of the country are in a transitional state, and it would be folly to undertake to determine the course of a party so long in advance. The wisest plan to pursue is to deal promptly with present necessities, and leave the issues of the future to be determined in accordance with the circumstances of the hour, and with a due regard to local exigencies.

The action taken yesterday by the Reconstruction Committee of Congress, with reference to Georgia, gives promise of a definite conclusion being arrived at before the close of the session. The fact that the Committee agreed to report the original bill, without the Bingham amendment, and with the clause of the Senate bill allowing a State militia force, shows that the views of its members have undergone a change. It is to be hoped the bill will speedily be reported and that the status of Georgia will be definitely settled. Almost any settlement of the case is preferable to a perpetuation of the existing muddle.

The colored citizens of New-York and Brooklyn have nobly vindicated the justice of their enfranchisement. They have voted quietly, intelligently, and on the Republican side. "We won't vote against our liberty," said the colored men to their recreant brethren of the Sixteenth Ward; and so in the twin cities they have faithfully cemented a union whose record will, ere long, be manifest. The single exception on the score of orderly conduct occurred in Brooklyn, where a ward politician seems to have been the aggressor, and the negro voter only struck in self-defense. It may safely be predicted of the colored citizens that they will never furnish a parallel to the disgraceful rowdyism that has been a frequent characteristic of various sections of their white brethren.

A somewhat excited controversy, with reference to the proposed "reforms" in the management of the Mercantile Library, has ended in the defeat of the reformers. The Library will therefore not be opened on Sunday. But even had the vote been reversed, the building could not have been thrown open on the Seventh day, for the Clinton Hall Association is opposed to the step. The members stand four against it, and three in its favor. The reformers have not lost much by their failure to win over a majority to their side yesterday.

The Romish Calendar contains a certain St. Christopher, who lived so long ago that many good Catholics don't believe he ever lived at all. If the news from Rome be true, the Pope proposes to make, out of compliment, perhaps, to the American Bishops, another St. Christopher, about whose existence no one has yet begun to doubt—namely, the immortal Genoese, [COLUMBUS. Though the Archbishop of GRANADA thought, with many others at that day, the schemes of the intrepid navigator to be "arrogant and presumptuous," yet good Prior PERDOT and princely Receiver LUIS were his fast friends, and on the whole the Church of the Fifteenth Century did him more justice than she was accustomed to render to bold speculators; and a becoming sense of gratitude for finding out a country which contributes so liberally to her support probably impels the present graceful, though somewhat tardy, act of canonization by the Church of the Nineteenth.

It must be gratifying to Ex-Secretary SEWARD to receive so many demonstrations of popular respect and appreciation. It shows that in spite of all partisan feeling there is an honest sense of obligation to him in the hearts of the people which cannot be overcome by detraction on the part of a few. Mr. SEWARD has accomplished as much for his country and for civilization as any statesman of his time; and we believe he stands as high as any in the estimation of the nation. Few American statesmen have anything like his reputation abroad. Yet, in the full vigor of his intellect, and with an unimpaired capacity for usefulness, he quietly withdraws from public life, at an age when most men would be animated by fresh ambitions.

It was quite proper that the Elevated Railroad should be tested by every possible means, but one essential precaution was entirely overlooked. The sidewalk passengers were not warned of the catastrophe that might happen at any point of the line. The heavy car was to operate as a test, and the necessity for applying a test presupposes the possibility of an accident. In some cases, indeed, as with artillery frequently, the trial continues until the point of failure is established. It is to be hoped that this matter will not be forgotten in future; it is not a pleasant excitement to walk beneath a structure with which experiments are being made to ascertain whether or not it will come down with a crash. The ordinary dangers of the street are quite sufficient.

In a land where grapes grow to the size of eggs, and squashes to that of hogsheads, it seems strange that the little tea-plant should be reluctant to take root and flourish. Yet efforts to introduce it in California have hitherto been scarcely more prosperous than in other parts of the Union. Certain difficulties connected with American mining have been surmounted by the simple process of importing foreign miners, and now that the people of the Flowery Kingdom are so numerous in the valleys of the Sierra Nevada, we may hope better things for our tea culture. It is, at all events, to be tried on a grand scale. Thirty thousand trees have been imported, a good number of shrewd agriculturists have employed Chinese hands, and gone into the business with a determination to be successful in it, if success be possible, and in another year the momentous question whether this continent is to be independent of Asia for its future tea supply is likely to be definitely settled.

The Spring meeting of the American Jockey Club will take place, we presume, somewhere about the first of June; but this presumption ought by this time to have been a well understood fact. It is to be hoped that the gentlemen in charge are not going to repeat the mistake which has worked so badly on former occasions. The public need to be told well in advance, and told repeatedly, of a coming entertainment in order to contribute their share to its success. Hundreds of traders and others, coming here to buy goods and transact business, would make their arrangements to arrive in season, or to stay over for the races, if they were only reminded of the dates when the meeting was to be held. Full details, so far as they can be ascertained, ought by this time to have been spread all over the country. This opinion is advanced, of course, on the supposition that a numerous gathering and prosperous financial results are thought desirable; if they are not, the case is manifestly different, and our suggestions are superfluous.

MRS. ELIZABETH CADY STANTON advertised a lecture, with a particular caution at the head of her bill that it was to be delivered "to ladies alone." Not content with this, the fair lecturer appended to her announcement another terrible warning against interlopers in the words "men not admitted." We do not quite understand what Mrs. STANTON here intended to convey. Did she mean that "women" in contradistinction to "ladies," were not to be admitted? And that "gentlemen" in contradistinction to "men" were, on the contrary, to be allowed that privilege? We fail to see any means, save by the acceptance of this invidious implication, of rendering Mrs. STANTON's purpose intelligible. It is a little surprising that she should have consented to speak at Apollo Hall. Thus to honor a place called after a member of the obnoxious sex, even though he be one of the doubtful personages of Greek Mythology, is hardly in keeping with Mrs. STANTON's general aims, or, we should suppose, with this particular lecture. The ladies of the Reform Movement should make haste to have a hall prepared and named after Juno, Pallas Athene—we hardly dare to suggest Venus—or one of the Nine Muses. Mr. FAGNANI, we are confident, would assist with pleasure in embellishing such an edifice, and, it might prove more successful than—the French Theater, let us say.

The Political Situation in Virginia.

From the Richmond Whig.

We do not suppose that such a contrast was ever exhibited between two rival parties in this country as was shown in the contest for power last year between the Conservatives and Radicals of this State. In numbers, they were not very far apart. In sentiment, in character and intelligence they were as distant as the antipodes. On the one hand, the great mass of the white population of Virginia, comprising an accession of moderate Republicans, with their colored allies; on the other, a set mainly of deluded negroes, led on by designing adventurers. The result was a triumphant victory for the Conservatives, the election of a Governor acceptable to the people of Virginia and the Administration, the admission of the State, and a rapid advance in the value of her bonds.

Not satisfied with letting well enough alone, and endeavoring to harmonize the conflicting elements as much as possible upon measures of State policy, irrespective of parties, some of our journals have made a persistent attempt to force the issue of Federal politics upon us at an unreasonable time, and to revive the old Democratic Party. The result has been that it has played into the hands of the Radical Party most effectively. It has driven off the moderate members of that party from the Conservatives, blotted its dimensions, and made it a very different organization from what it was last year.

We hope that the Conservatives, in the election soon to take place, will repair these evils as much as possible, by the enlightened policy of conciliation and kindness. The worst injury that we could inflict upon the colored race would be to give them power, which they are incapable of using, and which would soon pass from their grasp. But the course of the late Senator BLAND shows that some of them may be intrusted with office without injury or loss of dignity to the Commonwealth.

FORTY-FIRST CONGRESS.

SECOND SESSION.

SENATE....WASHINGTON, Tuesday, May 17.

Mr. CAMERON, in presenting a memorial for a general abolition of taxation on productions, said he thought the first duty of Congress was to reduce the taxes. Now, when our bonds were at par, he could see no reason why the working masses should be taxed upon their labor. He would favor, to a great extent, the substitution of external for internal taxes, and above all, the abolition of the tax on incomes.

MARSHALL AND SAN DIEGO RAILWAY.

Mr. HOWARD, from the Committee on Pacific Railroads, reported a substitute for the Marshall and San Diego Railroad bill, which he explained was to authorize a railroad from Marshall, Texas, to Trinity River, thence to El Paso, on the Rio Grande, and thence through the Territories and across the Colorado River to San Diego, on the Pacific. The bill granted twenty alternate sections of land on each side of the line in the Territories, and ten sections in any State through which the road might run. A large portion of the line was within the State of Texas, and as the United States owned no public lands in that State, no lands were granted. It would also authorize a connection with the lines of road from New-Orleans and Vicksburg. The amendment had received the sanction of the unanimous vote of the Committee. The bill was ordered to be printed, and placed upon the calendar.

BILLS INTRODUCED.

Bills were introduced as follows:

By Mr. ENLLOGG—For a grant of land to the Louisiana and Texas Railroad, to aid in the construction of a railroad from Vicksburg to the Texas State line.

By Mr. DAVIS—Authorizing the Courts to obtain evidence from the departments and officers of the United States Government.

PUBLIC LANDS IN SAN FRANCISCO.

The bill to relinquish the interest of the United States in certain lands in San Francisco was discussed during the greater part of the morning hour by Messrs. CASSERLY, COLE, WILLIAMS and STEWART. Passed.

THE FIFTEENTH AMENDMENT BILL.

Upon the expiration of the morning hour, the Fifteenth Amendment bill came up in order. Mr. FERRY proposed a modification of his amendment to the effect that which he stated to be to prevent the creating of any further political disabilities than now existed. He proceeded to reply to a criticism upon his speech on a previous day by the Senator from Indiana, (MORTON,) to the effect that the speech was one that would suit a Democratic caucus of Northern States remarkably well, but would carry Democracy to the hearts of Union men in the South. He (Mr. FERRY) claimed to speak for the Union men of the South in advocating a general removal of political disabilities, and referred to the Republican platform and the declaration of the Republican candidates in that section in support of his assertion. The Senator (Mr. MORTON) had referred to Georgia, and was constantly holding up that State as a place of crime and disorder. But if the destinies of Georgia had been in the hands of men of high patriotism and not of those who had trailed the party banner in the dust, and whose only aim seemed to be their own pecuniary advancement, affairs would have been different. He denied the stories and telegrams manufactured by order of a vessel Friend in Washington City, containing representations upon which no legislator could rely. Mr. FERRY asserted that the Republican Party of the North were in favor of removing political disabilities. The entire Republican Press of New-York, with its mighty influence, and stretching from one end of the country to the other, were in favor of pending bills on the subject. Now to continue these disabilities on the statute book would be repugnant to the principles on which the Republican Party rested, and he who, whether in or out of of Congress, insisted upon their continuance, was no longer a Republican as tested by the platforms of the party. The disabilities of the Southern people were not designed as punishments, but as measures of great public policy. The Fifteenth Amendment was a delusion and a snare while these disabilities remained on the statute books, because a black man was not enfranchised so long as he could not vote for his friends and neighbors. Had five hundred years of a system of test oath and punishment in Ireland raised up a loyal generation? Were the fires of rebellion in Hungary quenched by such means, or was peace the result of a free constitution and right of representation?

Mr. MORTON replied at length to the argument of Mr. FERRY, whose views, he said, entitled him to a seat on the Democratic side of the Chamber, and whose arguments should lead him next to move the repeal of all pensions to Union soldiers, or else to pension rebels. He also defended the Georgia officials from the charge of corruption, and argued that when admitted to participation in the Government the rebels of the South would turn upon and defy those whom they were now coaxing and flattering.

Mr. SAWYER eulogized the speech of Mr. FERRY as sound Republican doctrine, and thought the attempt to read that Senator out of the Republican Party would require more than mere assertion and denunciation for its accomplishment as it was not in his power to at least 4 of the Republican Senators on the floor, and four-fifths of the Republican voters in the United States. For himself, he would recognize no man's right to read him out of the party until he could show that the ground on which he stood was not Republican.

Mr. DRAKE believed that the only class under disabilities at the South at the present time was those who, after holding office under the United States Government and owing allegiance to it, engaged in the rebellion. Their number would not, he thought, exceed a hundred.

Mr. JOHNSON argued that the natural effect of proscriptive legislation in alienating the people of a State from the General Government was to foster State pride and local independence of national authority. He referred to the generally-entertained, though erroneous, opinion in the North prior to the war, that the allegiance of the citizen was due to the State Government, which protected him, and that the people there looked upon the United States Government as merely something necessary for carrying on foreign relations and like functions. In England, for instance, this divided allegiance never existed. Hence the criminal intent pertaining to the term "rebel" in that and other countries did not properly adhere to the Southern people.

Mr. CAMERON expressed his conviction, as the result of personal observation during a recent visit to to the South, that the rebellious spirit of the people was still alive, as shown by their contemptuous references to Northern men. When they appreciate their guilt it would be time enough to bestow clemency.

Mr. REVELS, having been called upon, proceeded to define his position and that of the Republican Party in Mississippi upon the question of general amnesty. He was in favor of removing disabilities in the South just as fast as the people gave evidence of loyalty. Wherever a man gave this evidence by ceasing to denounce and oppose the laws of Congress, by respecting them and laboring to carry them out, he was in favor of removing his disabilities. If this could be truly said of a whole State, he would be in favor of the removal of disabilities of that State. In the State of Mississippi the Republican Party had pledged itself to universal amnesty, and the Legislature had redeemed that pledge by the passage of a resolution asking Congress to remove the disabilities of citizens of the State, and which he had presented. The condition of things in Mississippi was exceptional. The lawlessness and violence prevailing in other reconstructed States did not exist there, but the people were harmonious and prosperous. He was in favor of amnesty in Mississippi, as the party had given its pledge to that effect, and the State was fit for it.

Mr. DRAKE made an argument against the general removal of disabilities.

During the discussion it was proposed to take up the House bill on the subject, which had been received from that body, but objection was made on the ground that the pending bill had been carefully matured by the Judiciary Committee, while the House bill was defective.

At 5 o'clock, after a short Executive Session, the Senate adjourned.

HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES.

THE REVIVAL OF COMMERCE.

The House resumed consideration in the morning hour of the bill reported by Mr. LYNCH to revive American commerce and navigation. Mr. LYNCH gave notice that he would call for a vote on it next Thursday.

Mr. WOOD addressed the House, prefacing his remarks with remarks as to the great importance of the question. He corrected what he characterized as a popular error, that the foreign commerce of the United States was on the decline. It was not the foreign commerce of the United States that was decaying. It was the navigation interests of the United States that were on the decline. The mistake was to confound commerce with navigation. What were the causes that led to the decline of American tonnage? The common idea was that it was attributable to the depredations of the Alabama. He admitted that that had some influence, but not to the extent generally supposed. He assigned several general operating causes for it. The first was the substitution of steamers for sailing vessels and of iron for wood. The second was the economy in the reduction of tonnage in consequence of the substitution of steam for sails, one steamer being able to do the work of three sailing vessels. The third was the ever production of ships from 1848 to 1856, stimulated by the discovery of gold in California and the trade to which it gave rise. The fourth was the influence of the Navigation laws, in which respect the United States was behind all other nations in the policy of refusing American registers to foreign-built vessels. The French steamers were bought in England; so were the Austrian vessels; so were the steamers of the Hamburg and Bremen lines. But the Navigation laws of the United States, founded on the Chinese policy of Chinese walls, stood at the threshold of American harbors, and shut out foreign-built vessels from entering under the American flag.

Mr. LYNCH inquired whether the commercial marine of England and the United States had not attained their highest point of prosperity under the very laws the gentleman was now condemning.

Mr. WOOD replied in the negative, and said that the gentleman's own report answered his question. The fifth cause of the decay of American tonnage was the transfer of American vessels to foreign owners during the late war; that transfer amounted to 850,000 tons, nearly one-quarter of the aggregate tonnage of the United States. The sixth cause was the depredations of privateers during the war. The loss by that means did not exceed 100,000 tons. While he would hold England to a just responsibility in that matter, he would not over-estimate or magnify the actual loss of tonnage. He hoped to live to see the day when England would be compelled, not only to make reparation, but restitution for the wrong. The seventh cause was the appreciation of the cost of labor and material in consequence of a depreciated currency and heavy taxation, causing a large difference in the cost of building and sailing ships. The bill, as reported, did not reach the causes. It was only a little "soothing syrup" to ship builders. In his opinion the true remedies were to be found: First, in a very general revival of trade, founded on a sound basis with a specie paying and currency; the abolition of internal taxes, and a greater public and private economy. Second, in new avenues of foreign commerce. Third, in the readmission to American registry of the American vessels which sought the protection of a foreign flag during the war. Fourth, in the modification of the Navigation laws, so as to admit foreign-built vessels to American registry, either free of duty or on payment of a moderate duty on tonnage. Fifth, in the allowance of a drawback of duty on ship-building materials. Sixth, by allowing ship-stores to be taken out of bond for foreign voyages. Seventh, in exempting tonnage from all taxes other than by the Federal Government. Eighth, in the granting of moderate compensation by way of postage on mails; and, ninth, in favoring American bottoms in the imposition of tariff duties, so as to discriminate in their favor on all foreign merchandise imported.

Mr. WASHBURN, of Wisconsin, favored generally the bill as reported by the Committee. He ascribed the decay of American shipping principally to the unfriendly course of Great Britain in the matter of the rebel privateers, and gave notice to the lobby that no scheme of subsidies would pass this Congress. The right to collect tonnage duty is clear and unquestioned, and if Congress determined to appropriate the money so collected to the aid of American shipping, it would be nobody's business; but subsidies to new lines were impracticable. No proper subsidy bill to new lines could pass, and no subsidy bill in which there was a big job certainly would pass. If the interest of American shipping could be promoted by a system of discriminating duties, he would say, abrogate at once your commercial treaties and discriminate in favor of American bottoms. But that policy would be followed by retaliation on the part of other nations. He hoped the bill would pass with such amendments as might be deemed proper, and then, if other measures could be proposed to favor the same object, they might be reported and acted on afterward.

The bill went over till to-morrow.

MISCELLANEOUS BUSINESS.

Mr. HILL introduced a joint resolution donating four condemned cannon and fifty cannon-balls to the Soldiers' Monument Association of Morris County, N. J. Referred.

Mr. JULIAN asked leave to present two petitions against STEPHEN J. FIELD, Associate Justice of the Supreme Court of the United States, and OGDEN HOFFMAN, Judge de facto of the United States for the District of California, and praying that articles of impeachment be presented against them. Mr. BANKS objected. Mr. JULIAN thereupon presented them under the new rule, and had them referred to the Judiciary Committee.

Mr. FOSTER, from the Reconstruction Committee, reported a bill removing political disabilities from ISAAC H. CHRISTIAN, of Charles City County, Va. Passed.

THE NAVAL APPROPRIATION BILL.

The House then, at 2:40 o'clock P. M., went into Committee of the Whole, Mr. ELDRIDGE in the Chair, on the Naval Appropriation bill, the general debate on which was limited to three hours.

At 4½ the Committee took a recess until 7½ this evening.

EVENING SESSION.

The Committee of the Whole resumed its session at 7½ o'clock, on the Naval Appropriation bill. The bill was further debated by Mr. ARCHER, Mr. DAWES, Mr. HALE, Mr. LOGAN and Mr. BECK.

Mr. DAWES, in the course of his remarks, said that the Navy Department, not content with the manifest and often-expressed will of the law-making power in limiting appropriations had antagonized itself with Congress, and had insisted on pursuing a course inconsistent with that marked out for it by Congress. For the last ten years, excluding the years of the war, the average appropriation for the navy had been less by more than two millions than was appropriated in this bill, and yet the Navy Department insisted that it should have ten millions more; the complaint which the law-making power had a right to make against the Navy Department was, that with the money furnished the navy was in the bad condition described. Why was it that the United States navy cost three or four times, per man, as much as the navy of Great Britain?

Mr. HALE asked Mr. DAWES, in reply, whether everything in that bill had not cost two or three times as much in the United States as in Great Britain?

Mr. DAWES went on to say that the United States navy, which consisted of only 8,500 men, cost $26,205,671, while the estimate for the British navy, last year, which consisted of 50,183 men, was only $40,000,000. Every vessel in the United States cost an average annually of $138,944, and in the British navy, $69,000. Every ton in the tonnage of the United States navy, cost $151 10 per annum, and the British Navy $72 66. To keep the American Navy afloat, to keep it in repair, cost more than twice as much as the British navy. It took one man, while the British navy could but 600 a man to keep it up to the standard. The United States Navy Department had estimated for $6,975,000 for repairs, while the estimates of the British navy for the year ending March 31, 1870, for new machinery and for repairs was but $3,500,749. At the same rate of cost as in England, the whole American navy should be kept in repair for $450,000 a year. What was the reason for this vast difference? The British estimates for the last ten years varied but very little, man for man, vessel for vessel, ton for ton. The whole expenditure for repairs of the British navy was just almost one-tenth of the cost for the repairs of the American navy, and yet the American navy had been allowed to run down to the condition in which its friends described it to be. The fault did not lie with Congress. It lay in a lack of efficiency, energy, and spirit in the navy of the present day.

The debate being closed, the bill was considered by paragraphs for amendment. The first paragraph was for the pay of commissioned and warrant officers at sea, on shore, on special service, and of those on the retired list and unemployed, and for mileage or transportation of officers traveling under orders—$4,600,000.

Mr. WASHBURNE, of Wisconsin, offered an amendment that no allowance shall be made to officers for drawing bills, receiving or disbursing money, or for servants' fuel, clothing, quarters, transportation, &c., thus cutting off the thirty-three per cent. allowance.

A long discussion ensued on the amendment, in the course of which a letter was read from Secretary ROBESON contending that Secretary WELLES, in making the allowance, had not transcended his authority, and that the allowance was and is lawful, and relating the history of the subject.

Mr. COX asked leave to have a letter read from the late Secretary WELLES, of whom he said he would as soon think of comparing an old canal scow to a magnificent ocean steamer as to compare Secretary ROBESON to Secretary WELLES.

Mr. HILL objected to the reading of the letter on account of the objectionable allusion to Secretary ROBESON.

The letter, however, was subsequently read.

Mr. SHANNON moved as an amendment to the amendment that thirty-three per cent be added to the pay of all officers of the navy below that of Commodore.

The amendment offered by Mr. SHANNON was first voted on, when it appeared that there were 80 for it and 48 against. No quorum voting, the Committee rose, and the House at 10 o'clock adjourned.

AMUSEMENTS.

Musical.

ITALIAN OPERA.

The second representation of the present series of Italian opera performances was given at the Academy of Music last evening. The opera of "Martha" was sung, with Signor BRIGNOLI as Lionello, Signor SUSINI as Plunkett, Miss MCCULLOCH as Lady Henrietta, and Miss CLARA PERI as Nancy. The audience was quite numerous, though hardly as large as there was reason to expect. The recollections which cluster about Signor BRIGNOLI's impersonation of Lionello are too abundant and for the most part too pleasant to have produced any other opinion but one favorable to the anticipation of an overcrowded condition of the house. The general impression he made in the part YEARS ago has not disappeared, and the special charm with which his sweet and tuneful voice invested the romance in the third act has not been dispelled, though vocal vigor and warmth, coupled with greater histrionic ability than Signor BRIGNOLI exhibits, have since had frequent hearing. It is hardly flattery to say that after his protracted absence, and also after a term of years have rolled away, that the impression last night was proven to be as deep as ever, and the charm as potent. A slight hoarseness was apparent occasionally in Signor BRIGNOLI's singing, and was the more perceptible by a mental comparison with its perfection on the previous evening, but it was not too often observed, thanks to discreet management and to the qualities of FLOTOW's music, which is not written, like VERDI's, with a view to augmenting the death-rate of singers' voices. It were a waste of space, of course, to point out the salient features of the opera, with the intention either of acquainting the habitual reader with their number or proportions, or of instructing him as to the prominence given them. We shall be content with noting that the duet for tenor and bass, by Signor BRIGNOLI and Signor SUSINI, the ever-welcome opening quartet, the duo following, and embodying the undying "Rose of Summer," the delicious, if familiar cantabile air in the third act, whereof mention was made above, and the pleading finale produced their wonted effect. Signor SUSINI was in better voice than usual, though it is evident still his resources are not always to be relied upon. Miss MCCULLOCH's voice has not been materially bettered in quality during her traveling experience, and its evenness was not so great as under more advantageous circumstances it probably is, but it is under better control, and used with an increased taste and experience, mirting, as does her improved presence, recognition and compliment. Miss CLARA PERI has already been written of here, in connection with musical entertainments. She sang Nancy in the German tongue, with a fair degree of success in respect of expressed approval, but with a doubtful result, we think, as to the advisability of renewing the experiment. The few rich contralto notes Miss PERI's organ expels are poor compensation, in all their richness and power, for a not over-accurate intonation and a tremulousness in the tone, which our memories prevent us from ascribing to the emotions of a first appearance. In the second act Miss PERI rendered an Austrian song, and between the third and the fourth, she interpreted the aria, "Ah! Mein Sohn," from MEYERBEER's "Il Profeta." The chorus, we have only to add, did its work with precision and force. Friday, Signor LEFRANC and Miss CANISSA are to perform "Lucia de Lammermoor." "Il Trovatore" is to be the opera at the Brooklyn Academy on Thursday.

CHURCH MUSIC ASSOCIATION.

Steinway Hall was crowded yesterday afternoon with a very large audience formed of the subscribers and friends of this valuable organization. The occasion was the last public rehearsal of orchestra and chorus preceding the concert, which will take place this evening. The orchestra and chorus together could not have numbered less than three hundred performers, the entire stage, which has been considerably enlarged, being filled with singers and instrumentalists. BEETHOVEN's mass in C, and the last part of WEBER's "Oberon" were rehearsed. The beauty and freshness of the voices in the choruses, and the admirable precision of the orchestra under Dr. JAMES PECH's precise and vigorous control, were prominent points of the afternoon's rehearsal. All things gave good promise for this evening, when a large and most distingué audience is expected. The solos in the mass will be sung by Mme. SALVOTTI, Mrs. JENNIE KEMPTON, Mr. W. J. HILL and Mr. JOSEPH JEWETT. The solos from "Oberon" will be interpreted by Mrs. INGORNE BROWN—who made a highly favorable impression yesterday afternoon—Mme. SALVOTTI, Miss JENNIE E. BULL, Mr. LEGGAT and Mr. JEWETT. The orchestra performs the "Jubel" overture and the overture to "Oberon," and did so yesterday with great correctness, spirit and effect.

GOTTSCHALK.

We understand that a number of ladies of high standing, musically and socially, have taken in hand the accumulation of a fund to be devoted to the erection somewhere in the City of a statue of the eminent American composer and pianist, L. M. GOTTSCHALK, whose recent death in Brazil the musical world has been called on to deplore. In aid of this object an amateur entertainment is to be given at the Union League Club Theater, on Saturday evening next, consisting of VICTOR MASSÉ's operetta of "Les Noces de Jeannette," with a well-known lady amateur of Philadelphia in the principal part, and the petite comedy of "The Morning Call," by Miss HENRIQUES and Mr. LESTER WALLACK. The musical conductor will be Mr. BOSSONI. Under such auspices the entertainment cannot fail to be one of the most interesting of the season.

CARLOTTA PATTI.

We remind the reader that the farewell benefit concert of Miss CARLOTTA PATTI takes place at Steinway Hall, Friday evening next. It will be the final farewell, &c., of the lady, and will also bring before the public for the last time this year, M. RITTER and Signor SARASATE. Messrs. HERRMANNS and HABELMANN will supply the vocal aid. The sale of seats will be commenced to-morrow.

Theatrical.

BURLESQUE AT THE OLYMPIC.

Judging from immense audiences Monday and Tuesday, and from laughter as hearty and applause as frequent as that evoked by a Christmas pantomime in traditional England, the burlesque performances of Mrs. JAMES A. OATES' troupe at the Olympic Theater are more genuinely successful than have been any representations since those of "Humpty Dumpty." They are in effect fascinating by the spectacular circumstances surrounding them, agreeable by the careful interpretation of a great deal of tuneful and familiar music, and extremely funny. We cannot now speak of them more fully, but shall do so hereafter, promising that a more lengthened account could not speak more eloquently as to their attractiveness, which the past two nights have proven to be real and prophesied to be durable. "The Fair One with the Blonde Wig" is the title of the extravaganza in which Mrs. OATES and her associates appear. It will be played not only every evening until further notice, but also at matinées on Wednesday and Saturday of each week.

A BOSTON BENEFIT.

It being understood, after the earliest appearance of Mr. FECHTER and Miss LECLERCQ in Boston, that New-York had given these artists "numbers" while Boston "gave them brains," it is worth recording the fact that on one occasion, at least, Boston gave Miss LECLERCQ little else. Mr. WALTER M. BRACKETT's letter to the Daily Advertiser of yesterday tells the whole story. Mr. BRACKETT says:

Mr. FECHTER having placed in my hands all the facts relating to the benefit recently tendered to Miss LECLERCQ at the Boston Theater, with full permission to use them as I saw proper, will you allow me, through the medium of your paper, to do the act of justice to the worthy gentleman who so kindly lent their names to promote the success of the object, as well as to the persons who composed the cultivated audience present on the occasion, by stating the circumstances, and thereby enabling them to judge to what extent the managers have kept faith, and done their share toward making the benefit a substantial one? On Friday evening (two week previous to the benefit,) Mr. JUNIUS H. BROOTH called upon Mr. FECHTER and asked him if he would play at a matinee on Wednesday afternoon, and also give an additional performance on Saturday evening. Mr. FECHTER agreed to do so. Mr. BOOTH then asked him if he could get Miss LECLERCQ's permission to use her name for a benefit, the management 'reserving the privilege to make her a handsome gift' on the occasion. Mr. FECHTER replied he would consult her, and return her answer. On Saturday, accordingly, at about 4 o'clock P. M., (during the performance of 'Ruy Blas,') Mr. BOOTH came to Mr. FECHTER, and received an answer favorable to his request, and Mr. BOOTH replied that he would 'start the thing at once.' At an hour very nearly corresponding with the time when Mr. BOOTH got his answer Mr. TOMPKINS met Col. FRANCIS I. LEE in the lobby of the theater, and asked him if he would be willing to get a list of names appended to a note desiring Miss LECLERCQ to accept of a testimonial benefit to take place on the following Saturday. Mr. LEE assented, and with his usual promptness of notice obtained some twenty names before leaving the theater, and the remainder during the evening. He took the note thus signed to Messrs. TOMPKINS and BOOTH, and, in the presence of another gentleman, asked them what terms they proposed to give Miss LECLERCQ? Mr. BOOTH said the usual terms, thirty-three and one-third per cent. Mr. LEE made some objections to this percentage as too small, and Mr. TOMPKINS said: 'Well, perhaps we can make it forty per cent.' The note with the list appended was then passed to Mr. TOMPKINS, and it appeared in all the morning papers; which was the first that Miss LECLERCQ or Mr. FECHTER knew of its existence. The performance took place, and, as is well known, the house was filled to the rafters by one of the most cultivated audi

REAL ESTATE TRANSACTIONS.

Again at the Exchange, yesterday, only one stand was occupied at the opening hour, and the following property was disposed of by Messrs. ADRIAN H. MULLER, F. R. WILKINS & Co.: A three-story high-stoop brown-stone front house and lot on the north side of One Hundred and Twenty-fourth-street, between Second and Third avenues. The house is a new one, just completed, on a lot 20x100.11, and the property was sold subject to a mortgage of $6,000. It brought $13,250. A similar house and lot immediately adjoining, mortgaged for an equal amount, was sold for $12,100. Three four-story Philadelphia brick front stores and dwellings on the east side of Third-avenue, 75 feet north of One Hundred and Third-street, were nominally struck off for $10,000 and $9,500, respectively. The above were the only sales made. Eight brown-stone front houses and lots on the north side of One Hundred and Tenth-street were advertised to be sold by the same firm, but were withdrawn. According to present indications, the sales at the Exchange today, and for the remainder of the week, will be light.

In reference to suburban property, should the weather prove favorable, A. J. BLEECKER, SON & Co. will to-day conduct the first of the series of sales of property at New-Brighton, Staten Island, which has been so extensively advertised by TRACEY, ARNOLD & Co. The lots are advantageously located, desirable, and are offered at favorable terms. A boat will leave Pier No. 18, North River, at 1 o'clock, for the purpose of conveying purchasers and others who may wish to attend the sale, which will begin immediately upon its arrival. The property is near the landing. Should the day be unfavorable, due notice will be given of the future sale.

To-morrow, at 1 o'clock, JOHNSON & MILLER's sale of 110 lots, belonging to the Westervelt estate, at New-Brighton, Staten Island, will take place, and from the liberal way of the terms upon which the property is offered, will, in all probability, be well attended.

A SAFE INVESTMENT.

First Mortgage Bonds of the Chicago, Cincinnati & Louisville Railroad Company.

These bonds are part of the first and only issue of the Company for $1,000,000, covering the entire property, and are at the rate of $13,700 per mile. Of the whole amount $600,000 have been already placed, leaving but $400,000 to be sold. They are 7 per cent. coupon bonds due in 1927, interest payable 1st January and July in New-York. The Road is in operation. It is 73 miles long, extending from its Feeders on the Lake Shore and Michigan Southern to Paris, where it connects with the Toledo, Wabash and Western and the Peru and Indianapolis Roads. It runs through one of the finest sections of Indiana and makes a connecting link in the best through line from Chicago to Indianapolis, and thence to Cincinnati and Louisville.

We confidently offer these bonds as a desirable security to investors, AS THE NET EARNINGS OF THE ROAD FROM THE OPENING HAVE BEEN IN EXCESS OF THE INTEREST ON ITS BONDED DEBT, AND ARE CONSTANTLY INCREASING. Report in detail can be obtained at the Road to Lake Michigan at New Buffalo on Michigan City the coming season, which will also contain the report for earnings.

GULIAN C. VERPLANCK.

His Life, Character and Writings—Discourse by Wm. Cullen Bryant Before the Historical Society.

Steinway Hall was comfortably filled last evening by an audience that assembled to listen to an address delivered by WM. CULLEN BRYANT on "The Life, Character and Writings of Gulian C. Verplanck," before the New-York Historical Society. GULIAN CROMMELIN VERPLANCK, Mr. BRYANT said, was born in Wall-street, in the City of New-York, on the 6th of August, 1786. The house in which he was born was a large yellow mansion, standing on the spot on which the Assay-office has since been built. His father, DANIEL CROMMELIN VERPLANCK, was a respectable citizen of the old stock of colonists from Holland, who for several terms was a member of Congress. On the mother's side, his grandfather, WILLIAM SAMUEL JOHNSON, of Stratford, in Connecticut, was one of the Revolutionary fathers. After taking his degree, VERPLANCK read law in the office of JOSIAH OGDEN HOFFMAN. His first public address, a Fourth of July oration, was delivered when he was eighteen years of age. In due season he was admitted to the Bar, and opened an office for the practice of law in New-York. In 1811 he married MARY E. FENNO. He lived with his young wife five years, and she bore him two sons, one of them at the age of thirty, unmarried, and the other has become the father of a numerous family. Her health failing, he took her to Europe, in the hope that it might be restored by a change of air and scene, but she died at Paris in the year 1817. Mr. VERPLANCK was elected in 1820 a member of the New-York House of Assembly. In the year following he was appointed, in the General Theological Seminary of the Episcopal Church, Professor of the Evidences of Revealed Religion and Moral Science in its Relations to Theology. For four years he performed the duties of this Professorship, with what ability is shown by his treatise on the Evidences of Christianity. In 1825, Mr. VERPLANCK was elected one of the three Representatives in Congress, to which this City was then entitled. He immediately distinguished himself as a working member. During Mr. VERPLANCK'S fourth and last term in Congress he became separated from his associates of the Democratic Party by a difference in regard to the Bank of the United States. In 1834, the Whig Party, looking for a strong candidate for the Mayoralty of the City, offered the nomination to VERPLANCK, who accepted it. COMMELIUS W. LAWRENCE, a man of popular manners and unquestioned integrity, was nominated by the Democrats, and after an exciting election, lasting, as it did in those days, through three days, VERPLANCK was defeated by some two hundred majority. After giving a fuller account of Mr. VERPLANCK'S writings, Mr. BRYANT said:

"In 1826 Mr. VERPLANCK was appointed a member of the Board of Regents of the University of the State of New-York, in place of MATHEW CLARKSON, who had been a Regent ever since 1787. In 1835 he was appointed Vice-Chancellor of the University, and at the time of his death punctually attended the meetings of the Board, shared in its discussions and bore his part in its various duties. In 1847 he was constituted one of the Commissioners of Emigration.

Mr. VERPLANCK had his party attachments, though he never suffered them to lead him out of the way he had marked out for himself. He would accompany a party, but never follow it. His party record is singular enough. He was educated a Federalist, but early in life found himself acting against the Federal Party. He was with the Whigs in supporting WILLIAM HENRY HARRISON for the Presidency, and claimed the credit of suggesting his nomination. Mr. CLAY he would never support on account of his protectionist principles, and when that gentleman was nominated by the Whigs he left them and voted for JAMES K. POLK, though he was disgusted by the fraud which obtained the vote of Pennsylvania for Mr. POLK under the pretence of his being a Protectionist. Subsequently he supported Gen. TAYLOR, the Whig candidate for the Presidency, but the nomination of Mr. BUCHANAN, in 1857, saw him once more with the Democrats, from whom he did not again separate. It may be said that in almost every instance the place of those who pass from the stage of life is readily supplied from among the multitude of those who are entering upon it; the well-graced actor who makes his exit is succeeded by another, who soon shows that he is as fully competent to perform the part as his predecessor. I feel when I look for one to supply the place of our friend who has departed, I confess I look in vain. I ask, but vainly, where we shall find one with such capacities for earning a great name, such large endowments of mind and acquisitions of study, united with such modesty, disinterestedness and sincerity, and such steady and various labors for the good of our race, conjoined with so little desire for the rewards which the world has to bestow on those who render it the highest services. But though we mourn now for his departure and see not new his honored place is to be filled, let us congratulate ourselves, and the community in which we live, that he was spared to us so many years. His day was like one of the finest days in the season of the Summer solstice, bright, unclouded and long. Farewell—thou last already entered upon thy reward! happy in this, that thou wert not called from thy beneficent labors before the night. Thou hadst already garnered an ample harvest; the sickle was yet in thy hand; the newly-reaped sheaves lay on the field at thy side, when, as the beams of the setting sun trembled on the horizon, the voice of the Master summoned thee to thine appointed rest. May all those who are as noby endowed as thou, and who as willingly devote themselves to the service of God and mankind be spared to the world as long as thou hast been."

THE MOUNT HOPE TRAGEDY.

Trial of Thomas Halloran for Killing his Wife—Details of the Case—Testimony for the Prosecution.

The trial of THOMAS HALLORAN, who was indicted by the Grand Jury of Morris County, N. J., some ten days ago, for murder in the second degree and manslaughter, for the killing of his wife, BRIDGET HALLORAN, on the 12th of April last, at Mount Hope, Rockaway Township, was begun yesterday, in the Court of Oyer and Terminer, at Morristown, N. J., before Judge DALRYMPLE, District-Attorney ALFRED MILLS for the State, and JACOB VANATTA for the prisoner. The panel of jurors contained but eighteen eligible names, and was exhausted when ten jury-men had been chosen, counsel for the prisoner challenging five and the State two. Sheriff BRIANT then presented ten additional names from which two were chosen, after the prisoner had challenged two. The court-room was crowded.

The prisoner sat at the right of his counsel, and took a lively interest in the proceedings. He is an Irishman of about six feet height, stoutly built. His features are most repulsive. Personally he would look around the Court and scan the faces of the witnesses, but seemingly recognised none of them. His little girl, MARY, who is the sole witness to the murder, would sometimes catch his eye and nod to him, but he took no notice of her. Since his incarceration he has gradually recovered from the fits of delirium tremens with which he has fearfully suffered. He complains of being lonesome at night and is a coward in the dark. Sheriff BRIANT, therefore, permits a prisoner to sleep with him. When news of the indictment of the Grand Jury reached him, he was much pleased that his neck was now in no danger.

The prisoner kept a miner's saloon and beer shop at Mount Hope. His family consisted of his wife and four children. On the evening of the 12th of April during a drunken row with his wife he violently beat her, and then with a stone it is alleged, inflicted such wounds on her head and breast as caused her death on the 14th. MARY, the child, witnessed the blows, and will testify against her father. On the night of the 12th a miner, named MURRAY, on passing the house, noticed a woman lying across the threshold of the door, but on approaching was warned away by HALLORAN. He returned with two other men at midnight, but they were forbidden to enter the house by HALLORAN. The next day a sister of the deceased came to the house to see her sister, having heard of the fight between the husband and wife. HALLORAN then kept her out of the house by main force, but acknowledged having killed his wife. She had HALLORAN arrested the following day.

R. S. BARNY, Justice of the Peace, was the first witness. Heard of the murder, and went with a Constable to make the arrest; they arrested HALLORAN, and witness then formed a jury, and with them, viewed the body; the jury rendered a verdict of willful murder against THOS. HALLORAN, and on his (the witness') warrant, he was committed to Morristown Jail.

ALEXANDER KANOUSE, the constable who went with Squire BARNY, testified to the making of the arrest, and to conveying the prisoner to jail.

JAMES MURRAY, a miner, was the man who first saw the woman on the door-step, and gave notice of the fight to the neighbors.

THOS. FITZPATRICK, another miner, testified to being with MURRAY when they visited HALLORAN'S house.

Dr. MESSAGE examined the body of BRIDGET HALLORAN, and found bruises on the head and breast; witness made nothing but an external examination.

MARGARET LYON, sister of the deceased, testified that she went to the house of HALLORAN, and attempted to go up-stairs; prisoner prevented her; she then accused him of murdering her sister, and he said "Yes, he had finished her and was ready to die for it."

The Court then adjourned till to-morrow.

The Railroad Accident at Elizabeth—The New-Jersey Central Railroad Company Censured.

The inquest upon the bodies of BERNARD O'CONNELL and PATRICK MCGOVERN, who were killed at the Magnolia-street crossing of the New-Jersey Central Railroad, at Elizabeth, on Saturday, was concluded last evening, in Elizabeth, before Coroner BRAUN. In addition to the witnesses called on Monday, several others were examined last evening, who gave testimony corroborative that given on the preceding day, to the effect that there was no flagman at the crossing, and that the engineer did not ring the bell to warn the unfortunate men who were crossing the track. The jury rendered a verdict censuring the Railroad Company for their negligence in not having a flagman stationed at the crossing. The people of Elizabeth are quite unanimous in condemning the Company for their gross negligence and disregard of the rights and safety of citizens and their obligations. It is said that an effort will be made to procure an indictment of the Company at the next meeting of the Grand Jury. A suit will be commenced by Messrs. LYON, of Newark, the owners of the wagon and horses, for damages. It is stated that the Company will immediately offer compensation for the lives of the victims of the disaster.

MERCANTILE LIBRARY.

Annual Election of Directors—An Exciting Contest—The Regular Ticket Triumphant.

The members of the Mercantile Library Association had an unusually warm contest yesterday over the election of directors for the ensuing year. As the public has already been advised, there were two rival tickets in the field, each supported by an earnest and determined party. The so-called reformers accused the old administration of extravagance and inefficiency, and of a disregard of the wishes of the members on the subject of opening the reading-room on Sundays. The supporters of the regular ticket, on the other hand, claimed that the results of their management were a sufficient guarantee of its efficiency, and denied that they had any disposition to disregard the wishes of the members on the Sunday question, that being a matter entirely beyond their power to decide. Both parties had held ratification meetings, issued campaign documents, and done in fact everything to set their claims before the small portion of the public immediately concerned in the battle of the books.

The polls were opened yesterday morning in the lower hall of the Library at 8 o'clock, and all along the street, in the neighborhood of Clinton Hall, were the posters of the rival factions, informing the unenlightened, in very contradictory terms, what persons were most likely as directors to promote the best interests of the Association. Within the building the walls and stairways, for two flights, were covered with similar conflicting announcements.

Before any one entering the lower hall, however, could "gather and surmise" from these various placards, he was seized by at least two representatives of each faction, each of whom thrust a ticket into his hand, and attempted to hustle him into an advanced position in the long line which had besieged the polls from early morn, where a "peg," in the shape of a moderately-sized boy, had been placed to hold the position. The electioneering was highly enchanting. "Regular peg," "reform peg," "vote the reform ticket," "bring the regular ticket," were shouted on all sides, and every new comer was thrust into line regardless of his rights as a voter or as a citizen, and fortunate for him if he was not thrust into two places at once, to find on reaching the ballot-box that he had no right to vote at all. A considerable force of policemen was on hand, to preserve order and keep the second hand, and the inspectors sat behind an iron railing, amid lunch and cigars, quietly receiving such votes as succeeded in reaching them. About every second man who presented himself was challenged by one side or the other, and unless he could prove his right to the franchise to the satisfaction of the inspectors, he was ignominiously turned away. The noble art of repeat ng had been brought in from the streets, these ingenious youths emulating the honorable conduct of the Sixth Ward roughs, and in many instances the same person was detected in attempting to vote for a third or fourth time. This, indeed, was scarcely concealed, and several persons were heard discussing their probable chances of passing muster again after having voted three or four times.

The excitement was kept up until a late hour in the evening, the crowd increasing after business hours until the polls closed at 9 o'clock. In the course of the evening there were several scuffles among the doughty contestants, but no serious harm was done. During the last two hours almost every person offering to vote encountered a challenge, and was put through cross-examination. Promptly at 9 o'clock the line was checked off, though still extending through the hall and for some distance down Aster-place. The canvassers then took charge of the ballot-box and retired to the Library-room to foot up the results. In about two hours it was found that the total vote cast was 1,175, and that the regular ticket, uncrossed, had received 915, which gave it a majority of about 175. The result was received with vociferous cheers from a portion of the crowd which had gathered on the stairways, and with evident disgust by the remainder, and in a short time thereafter the building was left again to the usual silence of the night.

SUNDAY-SCHOOL WORK.

Anniversary of the Sunday-School Missionary Union—Annual Report—Addresses by Rev. W. T. Sabine and Rev. Henry Ward Beecher.

The fifty-fourth anniversary of the Sunday-school Missionary Union was held last evening at the Collegiate Reformed Dutch Church, corner of Fifth-avenue and Twenty-ninth-street, before a very large audience. Mr. J. W. C. LEVEREDGE presided.

The Secretary, Mr. P. H. VERNON, read the annual report. It stated that the object of the Society was to gather under Bible and Sunday-School instruction the children of the City, and since last meeting it had been incorporated under the name of the New-York Sunday-school Missionary Union. It had now under its care 192 schools, 140 of which were in the City and the remainder in the vicinity.

Officers were elected for the ensuing year as follows:

President, Rev. Isaac Ferris, D. D. LL.D.; Vice-Presidents, M. C. Morgan, Albert Woodruff, J. W. C. Leveredge, R. B. Atterbury, Peter Balen, George S. Scofield; Corresponding Secretary, P. Harwood Vernon; Recording Secretary, Charles M. Earle; Treasurer, George S. Scofield, and a Board of Managers.

Rev. W. T. SABINE then delivered an address on "The Teacher and his Class." He referred to the great honor and distinction accorded to the Sunday-school teacher in the promulgation and diffusion of Christian principles among the poor and lowly, and pointed to the precedent which had been established in the life and actions of the Savior.

Rev. Mr. BEECHER spoke on "Mission Work in Great Cities." He drew a lively picture of the miserable condition into which our populations had plunged this great City. Personal ambition and personal aggrandisement appeared to be the guiding principle of the governors of New-York, and until that was totally subjugated, until the mass of the people were brought to a sense of duty, he could not hope for the thorough success of the mission work. But how was this to be accomplished? He maintained it was possible by a blending of the sympathies of the elevated with the humbler classes, and a disposition on their part to be united in the bonds of Christian brotherhood. Now the two classes were totally distinct. Even in religious matters the former carried their aristocracy to their places of worship, and churches were fitted up gorgeously for their reception to the exclusion of the poor. He contended that no other feeling than dislike could exist under such circumstances, and its eradication ought to be the first step toward the reorganization of society, and a hope of the advancement of the interests of Christ. He entreated the rich to enter the homes of the poor; to familiarize themselves with their wants, and to alleviate them; to show that they were not altogether unmeable to their existence, and be assured them that the result, while it would be beneficial to the poor, would be a source of joy and consolation to themselves forever.

The proceedings, which were enlivened with vocal and instrumental music, terminated with prayer.
